Trade Pact Attack Based On Falsity, Says Hull

Goes to Heart Of Farm Belt To Defend Program, Assail Its Enemies

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Secretary Hull, assailing opponents of his trade pacts as "narrow and short-sighted," asserted tonight that abandonment of the program would "render infinitely more difficult the process of building an orderly and prosperous world."

Addressing the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the usually mild-spoken Secretary of State said that "never was a more palpable and insidious falsehood perpetrated on the farm people" than to say that the $795,000,000 in agricultural imports in the first nine months of this year meant that much less to American farmers in the American market.

While much of his speech dealt with the trade program's effect upon the farmer, Hull also stressed international phases of the program.

"In the difficult days which lie ahead," he said, "the greatest of all issues will be whether or not the world will be reconstructed along the lines of economic security and of firmly established order under law, which will make unthinkable a repetition of conditions of international lawlessness and of economic chaos such as we have witnessed in recent years.

"In the resolving of these issues, the weight of our country's influence may well prove to be decisive. By adhering to the trade policy which we now follow, we can throw our influence on the side of economic progress and of peace and order—to our immense benefit."

Fight on Pacts Threatened

In carrying his defense of the trade program into the heart of the farm belt, Hull apparently had in mind those in Congress who have attacked the trade agreements as harmful to agriculture. With less than a month remaining before the next session, a number of Senators and Representatives of both major parties have threatened a large-scale offensive against the agreements.

Referring to farm imports for the first nine months, Hull said that two-thirds of these were of products "which even the authors of the Hawley-Smoot tariff considered so incapable of displacing our farm production and so indispensable for our people that they were left on the free list in the tariff act of 1930."

"What farmer" he asked, "was hurt by the $121,000,000 of rubber we brought in during this period? Or by the $101,000,000 of coffee? Or the $75,000,000 of raw silk? Or the $22,000,000 of bananas, the $20,000,000 of cocoa beans, the $19,000,000 of carpet wool, or the $15,000,000 of tea?"

The remaining third of agricultural imports, he said, was composed of imports which "do not displace—they supplement—our deficient domestic supplies."

Peace Efforts Failed

He termed the 1930 tariff act "one of the most ill-timed and costly pieces of legislation in the entire history of this country." He blamed the fall in farm income largely on it and credited the later rise in income to the trade-agreements program.

Discussing Europe's war, Hull said:

"Throughout the long period of tension which preceded the outbreak of present hostilities, our Government strove untiringly to strengthen the forces of peace. For many months it had been all too clear that, unless policies of peaceful and constructive cooperation could

Judge Taken Aback By Bill for Duck And Burgundy Wine

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—The noise-hating James C. Lewises, who complained that their sleep was shattered by the sound of derricks on construction work near their apartment—and who were invited by Magistrate Henry H. Curran to have a pleasant evening "on the town"—today filed their expense account.

The bill was $65.32, of which $40 was for dinner.

That "infinitesimal, lilliputian bill" which they ran up for wine, food and hotel room was paid today by the Manhattan Commissioner of Borough Works, with an "unknown benefactor" providing the cash—but even the magistrate, who ordered the round of pleasure, was a bit taken aback by the total, which could easily have been much more staggering.

"A little beyond my expectations," he said, glancing down the expense account, which included "duck a la

60,000 Destitute In Ohio Demand Food, Says Mayor

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Dec. 5.—"Sixty thousand men, women and children are destitute in our midst and tragically in need of food, shelter and clothing," Mayor Harold H. Burton declared today.

Burton demanded that the State meet half the cities' burden of feeding the hungry this year and next.

His outburst came less than 26 hours after Gov. Bricker insisted the State had done all in its power. Bricker upheld his refusal to call a special session of the Legislature to vote funds to continue curtailed relief operations in Cleveland and other Ohio cities.

Meanwhile, Bricker, speaking at Massillon, was forced to defend himself against sharp criticism from Mayor LaGuardia in New York and Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, in Washington.

Both of these critics took heated exception to relief statements they Precampaign pocketbook worries, besetting both parties, will overshadow alike convention dates and candidates when the Republican executive committee meets here in semiannual session tomorrow.

But the question mark screening convention strategy and candidate jockeying will undergo thorough informal probing over the week-end, as political bigwigs from every section of the country foregather for Saturday's Gridiron dinner.

Eschewing the larger issues of campaign and program, Republican executive committeemen tomorrow will struggle mainly with the problem of wiping out a $700,000 deficit. Like the Democrats, who are promoting a Jackson Day drive to raise $750,000 to refurbish their war chest, Republicans will feel better when their ledger is in the black.

Big Names on Way

But before the week is out, the largest converging here of national political figures in recent months will talk something more than finance. Washington hotel rooms and lobbies will be transformed into informal clearing houses for campaign ideas, as announced candidates, dark horses and party leaders "visit."

Besides 14 executive committeemen, and 9 national committee officers assembled for tomorrow's meeting, big Republican names here for the week-end will include former Gov. Landon, of Kansas; Col. Frank Knox, his 1936 running mate;

Kuhn Given 2½ Years in Bund Larceny

Perjury Action Ordered Against Two Who Testified for Leader

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—Fritz Kuhn was sentenced today to 2½ to 5 years in Sing Sing Prison for stealing funds from his pro-Nazi German-American bund, and the prosecution was directed to take action against two of his most faithful followers for what the court declared was their "patent perjury" in his defense.

The stout bundsfuehrer stood before the bench to hear the judgment, chewing a wad of gum, and muttered "Nothing" when he was given an opportunity to have his say.

Kuhn's conviction, on three counts of larceny and two of forgery, had left him open to a possible maximum penalty of 30 years, but Judge James G. Wallace remarked that he never had thought of imposing "a cumulative sentence and making a martyr of him."

The two bundsmen against whom the judge directed action by the district attorney's office were James Wheeler-Hill, national secretary, and Willy Luedtke, of Lodi, N. J., an official of the German-American Business League, bund affiliate. Assistant District Attorney Herman McCarthy told the court that action would be taken.

Judge Wallace held in abeyance until December 13 his decision on a contempt citation made during the trial against Peter L. F. Sabbatino, Kuhn's attorney, for angry exchanges with the bench.

Jury Here May Open Quiz of Foreign Agents

Mystery Craft Seized Off Carolinas; All of Crew Are Germans

A District grand jury may be called to consider evidence that a large number of foreign agents have failed to register with the State Department, as required by law, Attorney General Frank Murphy said yesterday.

Murphy conferred with President Roosevelt during the day, and told reporters afterward that espionage and other activities of foreign agents in this country were discussed in the conference.

The Attorney General predicted a number of additional indictments in the Justice Department's drive against foreign agents who have violated Federal laws.

Yacht Seized

A few hours after Murphy announced the new drive on espionage a Coast Guard neutrality patrol seized a "mystery" yacht off the North Carolina coast. The 50-foot sailing yacht Lekola was boarded on orders from Norfolk Coast Guard headquarters, according to Capt. L. F. Tuten, commander of the patrol boat.

While there was no apparent connection between the Lekola's seizure and Murphy's announcement, President Roosevelt expressed interest in the incident when he was informed of it at an afternoon press conference.

The crew of seven were all "Germans," according to reports from Wilmington, N. C., near which city the vessel was docked at Wrightsville Beach.

Rush-Hour Block Timing Test Urged by Chief Traffic Adviser

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the legislative and enforcement committee of the traffic advisory council, last night expressed enthusiastic support for the move to experiment with a "block" timing traffic signal system and an increased speed limit on major arteries.

"We are certainly far behind the times," he said. "The situation demands at least that we experiment with a few streets."

Wender's comment followed Commissioner Hazen's announcement that he would ask the traffic advisory council to consider the changes on an "experimental" basis.

"I'm a firm advocate of the progressive system of timing under normal conditions," Wender said. "But it is perfectly obvious that it does not work under rush hour conditions. We have all been involved in endless delay and chaotic traffic conditions at these periods."

Under the "block" timing system, lights would show all green or all red for greater distances than under the present system.

"I would like to see an experiment made with the block system during rush hours, while we maintain the progressive method during the rest of the day," Wender said. "This may make necessary a larger number of manually operated traf-

The Neediest Families:

Boy, Grandmother Require $50 to Live

By Lucia Giddens

Case 9

"It's not myself that I'm so worried about; it's Bobby." Mrs. A, who is 82 years old, said it with a tired but gallant smile. When there is not enough food for a full meal, she can hide her hunger—but it is much harder for her to watch her 13-year-old grandson slide away from the table with a disappointed look.

For years this aged grandmother has been providing not only for herself but for Bobby. Now the two of them form one of the 50 Neediest Families to be helped by generous citizens through The Post's Christmas Fund, now open for contributions.

In a few months Mrs. A will be eligible for an old-age pension. But until then she will suffer without outside help. When she finally had to ask for help, she still insisted she would much rather have work. Although she is getting feeble, she has been getting a day's sewing now and then, trying to keep on being self-supporting—even at 82.

She has had complete responsibility for the boy since he was three years old when her daughter, his mother, died. Even before that, the boy's father had left his family and disappeared.

The grandmother will not be eligible for the pension until March, because she spent part of the last year in another State, "and the law requires that applicant must have lived here consecutively during the last year, as well as for five out of the last nine years," it was pointed out by the agency which investigated Mrs. A's problem.

With the help of $50, Mrs. A and her grandson can manage to get along until March. This family, No. 9 in the list, is certified by the Family Service Association, which will administer help without cost.

Case 10

To be self-supporting again is the greatest hope of Mrs. B. The problem rests heavily on her shoulders, because her husband will never be able to work at his trade again and the seven children are too young to work.

The family is at a crossroads—where help at the right time will make an immediate and a long-range difference in their lives.

Roosevelt Asks Debt Payment Be Used for Invaded Nation

Treasury to Place $234,693 Deposit Due December 15 in Suspended Account

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday proposed that the United States use Finland's debt payments to this country for the benefit of the Finnish people, now resisting invasion by Russia.

As a new demonstration of American sympathy for the little Baltic republic, he revealed that the $234,693 payment due December 15 would be placed in a suspended account in the Treasury until he can ask Congress next month to authorize such a use as he suggested. Payments made by Finland in the past four or five years might be similarly expended, he indicated.

Relief Use Suggested

Use of the money to assist Finland's war wounded and refugees was suggested by the President as a possible step, though he told his press conference it had not been decided just to what purpose the funds would be put.

Almost simultaneously, answering urgent appeals for aid for the victims of warfare in Finland, the American Red Cross appropriated $25,000 for initial relief measures, and with $10,000 dispatched from London by airplane a shipment of medicines consigned to the Finnish Red Cross. The announcement was made by Chairman Norman H. Davis, who warned that as the war continues the suffering "may reach appalling proportions."

Sources of Criticism

It was indicated in some official circles, meanwhile, that peace efforts abroad are holding back application by this country of provisions of its neutrality act to the Russian-Finnish hostilities. It was said that officials here regard the prospects for peace between those countries as not hopeless; therefore the

Blow at Finns 'Inexcusable,' Halifax Says

Blames Nazi Policy, Says Peace Would Be 'Shortsighted' Now

By Raymond Daniell
Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 5.—Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax declared to the House of Lords today that the British people were "profoundly shocked" by the Russian invasion of Finland, but filled with admiration at the "magnificent resistance of the Finns."

The representative of the British government at the meeting of the League of Nations Council and Assembly to hear Finland's protest, the foreign minister declared, would make plain Britain's feelings about this latest "inexcusable act of aggression by one of the largest upon one of the smallest but most highly civilized nations of Europe."

Blames Germans

Earlier Prime Minister Chamberlain, in the House of Commons, announced Undersecretary Richard A. Butler would be the spokesman of the government at Geneva.

Halifax declared Adolf Hitler is responsible for Russia's invasion of Finland and has "bartered away the liberties of the Baltic peoples."

Condemning Russia for bombarding open cities and towns and "mutilating women and children," Halifax asserted, the Soviet invasion of Finland "seems to be the direct consequence of Germany's policy."

"I have heard it suggested," he continued, "that an immediate peace on almost any terms would be desirable in order to save Western civilization from worse perils. I think that view is shortsighted."

Sees Justification

To call a truce in the hostilities before obtaining a minimum condition from Germany, Halifax said, could accomplish nothing but help the present leaders of the German government to convince their people that the "method of force had not worked too badly."

The British people, he declared, did not expect a quick, easy victory, and did not underestimate the skill, power and determination of the enemy. Nor was the government counting on an "early collapse of the enemy on the home front" to

Norway Calls Danes, Swedes To Peace Talk

Stockholm's Navy Mines Waters Around The Aaland Islands

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Copenhagen, Dec. 5.—Norway issued a rush call today for a conference of Scandinavian countries to explore the possibilities of peaceful settlement of the Finnish-Russian war and to take stock of their own situation.

Emphasizing the earnest desire of the northern countries to reestablish peace, Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht invited the foreign ministers of Sweden and Denmark to meet with him in Oslo Thursday.

The prospect of any stronger stand by the three nations in support of Russian-invaded Finland was dimmed, however, by a subsequent declaration by Prime Minister Thovald Stauning of Denmark that his country would maintain neutrality.

Sweden, showing increasing alarm at the Soviet incursion into Finland, mined her territorial waters near the Finnish-owned Aaland Islands in the Baltic and took other precautionary steps to strengthen her defenses.

Difficult to Navigate

The Swedish mine-laying move followed the Finns' announcement of refortification of the Aaland Islands. The mines and Finnish fortifications thus closed effectively the Bothnian Gulf against the Red fleet unless Russia could capture the strategic islands which command navigable channels between the two northern countries.

Observers in Helsinki pointed out that Finland's fortification of the Aalands indicated her hope that help might be forthcoming from her neighbors, and thus was making

Italy Sends Finns 60 Planes With Pilots, Technicians

By International News Service

Helsinki, Dec. 5.—Finnish army leaders tonight hailed the arrival of 60 Italian Savoia-Marchetti bombing planes, accompanied by Italian technicians and training pilots, and hastened to incorporate the new weapons into Finland's small air force.

Ten of the new planes, it was reported, were the gift of the Italian people, who, according to reports from Rome, have been staging daily demonstrations condemning the Soviet attack on Finland and expressing the utmost encouragement for the Finnish cause.

Italian pilots who accompanied the planes were reported to have said "we expect to make as good use of these speedy bombers against the Soviet air raiders as we did in Spain."

This report and the fact that such a large shipment of Italian planes arrived in such a relative short time led to speculation as to whether Italy would join in the Russo-Finnish war in the same manner and to as great an extent as she did in the Spanish conflict.

Chief interest centered in the method of delivering the 60 Italian planes, 25 of which reached Helsinki

Underdog Strikes Back

Helsinki, Dec. 5.—The Finnish army tonight reported the capture of many Russian prisoners and the destruction of eight enemy tanks in the Karelian Peninsula while their air force bombed Soviet bases beyond the Arctic Circle.

The losses were inflicted on the invaders at Salmi, on the north shore of Lake Ladoga, after the Russians launched a heavy artillery attack, it was reported, with the Finns using a new automatic rifle with deadly effect.

At the same time, the army said the Russians had captured the little Arctic village of Kuolajarvi, 50 kilometers (about 31 miles) from the border.

The communique said it was evident that the Red army was moving large numbers of troops against northern Finland and acknowledged giving ground further south.

Baltic Raid Reported

[Information in Moscow indicates, however, that the main Russian concentrations are midway between the northern and southern Russo-Finnish frontiers, apparently in preparation for a direct drive across the narrowest part of Finland to the Gulf of Finland—or for an enveloping movement swinging southward, the New York Times said.—Editor's note.]

Finnish fliers were reported in Norwegian dispatches during the day to have raided a Soviet air base at Murmansk and to have destroyed 60 Russian planes with incendiary bombs. Murmansk is within the Arctic Circle 60 miles from the Finnish border.

Another Finnish air raid on Paldiski, Baltic port which Russia leased from Estonia and whence Soviet bombers are alleged to have set out to bomb Helsinki, was reported. The port is across the Gulf of Finland from Helsinki.

Both reports were without confirmation.

The communique said 64 Russian tanks had been destroyed in six days' fighting, and that enemy losses amounted to 2,000 men.

Fortified Line Attacked

According to descriptions of the fighting reaching Helsinki, many tanks struck traps covered by snow. Those that were not destroyed by land mines immediately became the targets of Finnish antitank guns.

The official announcement also told of artillery duels on Lake Ladoga between Finnish coastal batteries and light Russian naval vessels.

G. O. P. insiders say Herbert Hoover's drive for vindication is getting so hot that he now regards himself as a likelier 1940 nominee than Tom Dewey . . . They predict he will have around 200 first-ballot votes at the convention.

The Gallup Poll

Dewey and Roosevelt Run Virtually Neck-and-Neck in Experimental Survey

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 5.—One political question which has come to the forefront in recent months, particularly since the European war, is just how strong a third-term race President Roosevelt would run against a flesh-and-blood Republican candidate.

DR. GALLUP

To find some indication, the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted an experimental test in which it matched Roosevelt against Thomas E. Dewey, the young Republican district attorney who will make his first Presidential campaign speech in Minneapolis tomorrow.

The results are by no means a conclusive indication of what might happen if these two men were actually the candidates in 1940, for events and developments in the coming months will almost certainly alter opinion to a greater or less degree.

As of today, however, the Institute's tests show the two candidates fairly evenly matched in this purely hypothetical race, with Roosevelt favored by a slight majority of those expressing a preference.

The issue presented to the voters, who comprised a carefully selected cross-section of both parties throughout the country, was as follows:

"If Thomas Dewey runs for President in 1940 on the Republican ticket against Roosevelt running for a third term on the Democratic ticket, which would you prefer?"

The vote of those expressing a preference follows:

Roosevelt	54%
Dewey	46

Approximately one-seventh of the voters in the survey, or 14 per cent, said they were undecided at this time. Their vote could, of course, tip the scales in such a close race if most of it went to one or the other candidate.

By comparison with six months ago, Roosevelt has increased slightly in popularity against Dewey, for a similar experimental test last May found Roosevelt preferred by 45 per cent and Dewey by 55 per cent.

Neither survey, however, represents anything more than a purely experimental "trial heat." It is not possible to measure at this time the effect of unknown factors such as convention fights, party platforms, radio broadcasts, newsreel appearances and other factors by which the public appraises candidates. Nor can the attitude of the country toward a Roosevelt third term be measured except in a very general way until the President announces his intentions.

An analysis of the vote by parties indicates that a small bloc of Democratic voters say they would switch parties to vote for Dewey. A still smaller group of Republicans say they would prefer Roosevelt to Dewey.

	Prefer Dewey	Prefer Roosevelt
Democrats	12%	88%
Republicans	92	8

Especially interesting is the attitude of the various income groups in the poll. The vote for Dewey declines steadily as one goes down the income scale, and the vote for Roosevelt increases correspondingly. Thus among the voters in the top income group Dewey is preferred by 67 per cent of those questioned, but among persons on relief he is favored by only 27 per cent.

A similar progression is noted by age groups, with Roosevelt popular among the young voters—those under 30 years of age—and Dewey favored by the other extreme, 50 years and over.

INCOME GROUPS

	Prefer Dewey	Prefer Roosevelt

Middle	51	49

Unified Power System Urged By Roosevelt

Connecting Links Would Meet Defense Or Peakload Needs

By Felix Cotten

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that the Administration was considering a partnership arrangement with private power companies under which their plants would be hooked together to mobilize their generating capacity for national defense or maximum peace-time needs.

The suggested hookup project, he explained, would be similar to a power "grid" system now in effect in England.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, in a statement opening a series of conferences on the question of an adequate power supply, said "the more the industry is prepared to do to meet this problem of national defense, the less the Government eventually will have to do."

Hands-Off Policy Hinted

This was interpreted in Administration quarters to mean that the Government would adopt a hands-off attitude to the extent that the private power industry itself was willing to connect systems.

The conferences are between the national power policy committee and officials of about 50 power companies, nearly all of which are east of the Mississippi River. Ickes called the conferences in his capacity as committee chairman.

Alfred Neal Speaks

At the opening meeting yesterday, problems presented in the Washington-Baltimore area were taken up. Alfred G. Neal, acting president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and J. H. Ferry, vice president and chief engineer, represented the local company.

One problem considered was the question of power needs in case the United States should become involved in war. No effort is being made to chart requirements or possible plant expansion beyond 1941.

Ferry said the local company felt that, with its present capacity and construction plans, it would be in a position to take care of any contingent demand that could be foreseen now. Since Washington is not a highly industrialized area, he explained, the only effect of war on local power needs presumably would be occasioned by supplying the requirements of a larger number of Government workers.

Load Data Are Given

Pepco, Ferry explained, has furnished the committee with data on load conditions, capacity, and other matters on which information was requested by Ickes in a letter to the power companies.

The suggested "grid" system for power companies, it is understood, would be similar to the hookup now in existence between power facilities in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Pepco has a hookup with the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Co., of Baltimore, and the Pennsylvania Water & Power Co., and the Safe Harbor Water Power Co. The latter two have hydro-electric plants on the Susquehanna River, and supply power to Consolidated and Pepco. The hookup extends to Philadelphia.

Byrd to Address Horticulturists

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—Senator Harry F. Byrd, who owns extensive orchard lands, will be among the speakers at the forty-fourth annual convention of the Virginia Horticultural Society which opened here tonight.

The program includes numerous scientific papers and discussions. Senator Byrd's address will be delivered at Wednesday night's dinner meeting.

Cotton Export Subsidy Slashed In Half to Prolong Program

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace last night cut in half the Government subsidy rate on cotton exports to conserve funds set aside for the bounties and lengthen the range of the program.

The cut, effective last midnight, was from 1.5 cents to .75 of a cent a pound.

Wallace, in a statement, said the present export demand "indicates probable continued favorable export sales with the reduced payment" and the cut "will make possible continuation of the program for a longer period with the available limited funds."

It was learned that the Government already is pledged to pay out more than $32,000,000 of the total $36,000,000 provided by Congress for the subsidized cotton export program. Seven months of the cotton marketing year remain.

Reporting that results of the program to date have been "very satisfactory," Wallace said exports of cotton through December 4 have totaled 4,344,554 bales.

"This is 982,000 bales more than the total export of cotton from the United States during the entire 1938-39 crop year. In addition, sales and deliveries of cotton products in the equivalent of 228,000 bales have been made during this period. This is also far above the total export of cotton products last year."

Heavy Nazi Losses Reported in Raids

Paris, Dec. 5 (DS).—Heavy German losses in a series of raids on French positions along the Western Front were reported by the French war office tonight. All of the raids were turned back, it was stated.

The raids coincided with increased Nazi aerial reconnaissance activity which today carried German planes as far as the outskirts of Paris. Anti-aircraft batteries drove them off.

It was understood the infantry raids took place at widely separated points and astonished the French command with their seemingly utter waste of men.

Lewis Orders Intensified C. I. O. Drive

More Efforts Urged to Wrest Control of Building From A. F. L.

By the United Press

C. I. O. President John L. Lewis last night ordered full speed ahead in a campaign to wrest control of labor in the construction industry from the A. F. of L. and told his regional directors and organizers to let no feeling of consideration for the adversaries of our movement weaken your resolve nor lessen your efforts."

"Our movement derives its support from its own members, and our first obligation is one of loyalty to our own objectives, our own ideals and our own membership," he said in a special communication to C. I. O. regional leaders.

His demand for addition effort in organizing the construction workers appeared to place a new barrier in the path of the Roosevelt Administration peace efforts. Any C. I. O. success in the building trades field would bring strong objections from entrenched A. F. of L. unions should the question of merger be raised.

Peace negotiations between the two groups, instituted at the personal request of President Roosevelt, have been in indefinite suspension since April 5, and recent efforts of the President and his chief labor advisers to revive them thus far have not been successful.

Lewis said that the action of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, headed by his brother, A. D. Lewis, in organizing 70 local unions in 20 States and the District was "an achievement worthy of commendation and support."

He told the C. I. O. officials that local unions can be organized in every community with the slogan, "C. I. O.-built homes for C. I. O. members."

Irene Castle Withdraws Suit To Divorce Maj. McLaughlin

She Asked Custody Of Two Children and $150,000 Settlement

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Irene Castle McLaughlin, former international dancing star, today withdrew her suit for divorce from Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, wealthy coffee merchant and sportsman.

Close friends of the couple, who asked that their names be withheld, said the McLaughlins' differences had been composed but they would continue to live apart. Mrs. McLaughlin will remain in the old Mill Road home, owned by the major, while he will reside in his suburban Lake Forrest home, 8 miles away.

The suit, alleging cruelty, was filed two years ago. The widow and dancing partner of Vernon Castle had asked for custody of McLaughlin's son and daughter, alimony and a settlement including $150,000 she contended she had advanced for family expenses.

Neither the major nor the attractive former stage and screen star was present in the court of Superior Judge Grover C. Niemeyer when counsel for Mrs. McLaughlin appeared to ask dismissal. Rumors of a reconciliation had been prevalent for months.

Almost from the time Mrs. McLaughlin sued for divorce on September 23, 1937, the couple had been involved in squabbles over custody of their two children, Barbara, now 13, and Billy, 10. In recent months, repeated court continuances—reportedly for an out-of-court settlement of certain controversial points—gave rise to rumors a reconciliation was under way.

The major and the dancer were married on Thanksgiving Eve, 1923, the third marriage for her, the second for him. Mrs. McLaughlin's first husband and famous dancing partner, Vernon Castle, was killed in the World War.

Mrs. McLaughlin's second husband was Capt. Robert E. Treman. They were divorced in Paris. In 1910, Maj. McLaughlin and the former Helen Kinnear Wyle, of Baltimore, were divorced.

Mrs. McLaughlin returned to the stage in a dramatic role last summer. The major, owner of the Chicago Blackhawks, professional hockey club, recently was hospitalized for treatment of a kidney ailment.

Film to Be Shown

Post-Campaign Week Nets Chest $23,000

$111,000 Still Needed For Quota; at Least 50 Aides to Keep Striving

A week's post-campaign drive brought the Community Chest $23,000 nearer its $2,000,000 goal for 1940, it was announced last night, but the funds still need approximately $111,000 to carry the annual appeal over the top.

At least 50 of the campaign's 950 volunteer solicitors have offered to continue the battle until every penny of the goal is reached in order to assure adequate care and services for the city's underprivileged and needy.

Chest Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., expressed optimism that the objective would still be attained, but emphasized that only a continuance of the intensive drive and a person-to-person plea for gifts would turn the trick.

Gifts Are Smaller

Although the latest audit had not yet been completed last night, the figures indicated that the Governmental unit headed by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines had brought in more than 99 per cent of its quota. Approximately 96 per cent of their quotas were marked off by the metropolitan unit, led by W. W. Wheeler, and the group solicitation division, directed by Charles B. Dulcan, sr.

Willett pointed out yesterday that gifts have surpassed last year's 192,000 individual contributions, but that the gifts have been smaller. He stressed the fact that the end of the official campaign for Chest funds did not end the need—nor the quest—for money until the minimum $2,000,000 is obtained.

"There's no quitting at a time like this," Willett declared. "For 1939 we collected $1,910,000 for the Chest agencies. Next year these same agencies will need at least $2,000,000 to carry on their expanded services. So it is not a question merely of doing as well as last year. We have to do better than that."

Man-to-Man Drive

Christmas gifts, the general increase in business and expected increase in dividends to stockholders, together with gifts from Washingtonians now out of town are expected to swell the Chest total. But the major test, Willett emphasized, would be the man-to-man solicitation to be undertaken among greater Washington residents who have thus far not made any contribution at all.

Meanwhile, the Chest auditors are planning to base their agency budgets on last year's total of $1,910,000 in the hope that no paring down will be necessary.

"We'll reach our goal," Willett averred, "if it takes us all of 1940 to do it. We just can't let down the people who will need Chest help."

How the Police Kill a Skunk Leaves a Bad Odor All Around

Mrs. Herbert W. Elmore, president of the Washington Humane Society, is unable to see any point in any animal—even a skunk—being shot, bludgeoned and carved to death, which accounts for a sharp protest he sent yesterday to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

"It was shocking," she said, commenting on the methods used by Eighth Precinct police yesterday in dispatching a frightened skunk discovered in front of a residence at 5209 Chevy Chase parkway. "If I were a man I would pummel those policemen."

Mrs. Elmore's reaction, coupled with that of a Biological Survey official, promises to make a sort of cause celebre out of the incident and possibly bring about a change in tactics by police when they are stalking helpless beasts.

"From what I understand," said Mrs. Elmore, "the skunk was not only bothering no one, but did not even discharge its characteristic self-defense oder until it was molested. If the Humane Society had only been notified, we would have captured the creature and presented it to the Zoo."

D. D. Green, division chief in Biological Survey, was more restrained but hardly less critical of the Eighth Precinct policemen who shot the skunk and then, when a bullet didn't kill it, beat it with a club and finally applied an ax.

"For one thing, the skunk is too valuable as a fur bearer to kill indiscriminately," he declared. "I believe that, in this instance, if the animal had been left unmolested, he would have left his refuge in search of food when darkness came—and never returned."

As it turned out yesterday, the slaying of the skunk not only aroused a storm of indignation, but made at least two residences almost uninhabitable, put a police car out of service pending deodorization and clothed several policemen and citizens with an unpleasant aroma.

The animal was discovered in a window pit just outside the living room of Mrs. Benjamin Ginzburg by a newspaper carrier. Police were called and Pvts. Oberon Warren and V. V. Holcomb responded in a scout car. Warren fired a bullet into the animal, transferred it to the curb to die and went on.

Then someone noticed the skunk trying to drag itself away and the police were recalled again. A squad led by the precinct commander, Capt. Lloyd C. Kelly, went into action, slugging the skunk with nightsticks and finally using an ax.

President Sides Toward War, Soviets Charge

'U. S. Imperialism' Attacked in Bitter Magazine Article

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Dec. 5.—The Communist Party monthly magazine Agitator's Companion, which provides propaganda material for organizers and lecturers, attacked President Roosevelt and "America's imperialism" today and added:

"The American Communist Party is actively preparing for fulfillment of its historical task in the new international situation."

In an article by far the most bitter against the United States yet to appear here, N. Ross wrote:

"President Roosevelt is more and more siding with the incendiaries of war. The United States Government is issuing extraordinary decrees which it is claimed are directed against spies and saboteurs, but in reality are used against Communists and all antiwar forces. . . .

"Faced With Great Task"

"American toilers are faced with a great task—that of crushing the war plans of a powerful foe—American imperialists. The American Communist Party is actively preparing for fulfillment of its historical task in the new international situation. . . .

"Breaking of world hegemony, American imperialists are striving to supplant competitor-imperialists from Latin America. They are striving to strengthen their position in China. . . ."

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Dec. 5.—Accounts of the fighting today produce more poetic language from Nicolai Virta, well-known dramatist, and other correspondents.

There is yet another picture of Terijoki which has been variously described as the scene of mass meetings in favor of the Kuusinen "government," as set afire by the retreating Finns and as having a population of only eight persons in cellars when the Red Army arrived.

Today Virta says that, after hard fighting the Red Army entered Terijoki December 1, but sniping lasted several days.

Headquarters at Leningrad denied reports that the Red Army had lost 32 tanks and 16 planes. The Soviet has lost only two planes through Finnish fire, it is declared, while two others apparently lost their bearings and were forced to land in Finnish territory.

Since November 30, the Soviet claims, 11 Finnish planes have been shot down and not a single Soviet tank has been captured by the Finnish army.

Headquarters of the Red Baltic fleet, for its part, categorically denied reports the Cruiser Kirov was even hit much less badly damaged at Hangoe or that a Soviet minelayer was sunk by coastal batteries.

An elaborate account is published in Pravda of the "storming" of Hogland Island opposite Kronstadt. Pravda publishes a dramatic account of how several warships, transports and "mosquito cutters," moved in pitch darkness on Hogland. As a torpedo boat laid a smoke screen, a "furious artillery bombardment" began, protecting a landing party convoyed to shore by the cutters.

Apparently it was all for nothing, for the writer says "our fighters were surprised to find no resistance in this 'snake nest' of the Finnish militarists."

Anti-tank barriers set up by the Finns on the Karelian isthmus were proving serious obstacles to the Red army's camouflaged amphibian tanks and caterpillar tractors. Dispatches said the tanks were overcoming these obstacles, mostly big ditches and felled trees, with a minimum of losses but that progress was slow.

Cab Driver Held In Traffic Death

Harry L. Dixon, 35, a cab driver, of 19 Second street northeast, was held yesterday under the negligent homicide act by a coroner's jury investigating the traffic death of Christopher C. Harris, 55, of 2149 California street northwest.

Harris, the seventy-eighth traffic victim in the District this year, died of a skull fracture at Emergency Hospital Sunday a few hours after police reported he was knocked down by Dixon's automobile at Columbia road and California street northwest. According to witnesses, Harris was near a safety zone when he either fell or walked in front of the machine.

every effort to keep open sea communications with Sweden.

The islands stand about in the middle of the 90-mile gulf, but even in peacetime an expert pilot is required to steer a course through this many-island archipelago.

Negotiations also were sped in Stockholm for formation of a new government to present a united front in Sweden's efforts to preserve neutrality.

For the first time Sweden acknowledged "partial mobilization" in ordering about 40,000 men, including artillerymen, engineers and commissary detachments into "wartime service." The order brought Swedish forces under arms to about 150,000, compared to her normal standing force of 20,000.

Norway likewise stepped up defensive measures by sending more men to her far northern frontier adjoining Finland.

The Stockholm parleys of the kings of the Scandinavian countries last month resulted in a declaration of solidarity among the northern countries, but it was pointed out that declaration meant moral and economic support, but not military aid, for Finland.

Koht declared today, however, that Finland's plight deeply concerns Scandinavia "both because of urselves and because of Finland."

Denmark's reiteration of her neutrality was considered by diplomats as inevitable since she has a nonaggression pact with Germany and thus would refrain from any action which might change her neutral stand toward all phases of the European upheaval.

Finns Bomb Soviet Bases

land and half in Russia.

Finnish losses during the past five days of warfare have been "very small," the high command announced.

Fierce encounters between Finnish troops and two advancing Russian columns were described in the lengthy communique. One Soviet army was said to be striking against the "Mannerheim Line" of defenses in the Karelian Isthmus and another skirted the northern border of Lake Ladoga.

North of Lake Ladoga it was reported Finnish forces withdrew from Salmi into nearby forests and marshes, where sledges are the only means of heavy transportation. Swift Finnish skiing units, starting from these backwoods bases, were said to be taking a heavy toll of advancing Russian troops.

The Finnish general staff said that on the whole it was a "dull day" on the southern front in the Karelian Isthmus with bad weather keeping airplanes grounded.

But many Finns were fearful of violent air raids against Helsinki tomorrow, the twenty-first anniversary of Finnish independence.

In the Petsamo district, above the Arctic Circle, frequent machine-gun attacks by Russians were reported, with the Finns using their automatic rifles to good effect.

Finnish troops were reported withdrawing from the towns of Uusikirkko, Valkjarvi and Rautu in accordance with a prearranged plan.

Heavy pressure was reported on the eastern frontier with the Russians using their motorized equipment with some effect.

For the last two days the Russian fleet was said to have bombed the outer islands of the Suursaari group in the Gulf of Finland. The largest of the group, Tytarsaari, was occupied by Russians after Finnish sea guards there moved out.

Finnish flyers managed to make a few reconnaisance flights.

A Finnish anouncement said Russian prisoners had declared their officers informed them the Finns were the aggressors and that war would be over in five or six days.

Helsinki officials expressed pleasure at Argentina's action in moving that Russia be expelled from the League of Nations. They said South American countries had shown "great understanding" of Finland's position.

Most civilians have been moved from the capital to safer points inland, but workmen still are busy boarding up Helsinki buildings.

A Finnish government spokesman, discussing Moscow's statement that Russia is at peace with the Finnish people, declared that "the world's diplomatic history knows no document as cynical as this.

"This document, better than anything, shows the real face of the Soviet government, which declares itself the protector of small nations and creator of the independence and liberty of small nations."

Arctic Attack Repulsed

Kirkenes, Norway (at the Finnish frontier), Dec. 5 (AP).—Finns fighting stubbornly in the cold and semi-twilight of the Arctic region, successfully repulsed sporadic Russian attacks today and reported shooting down a Russian bombing plane.

It also was reported that 200 Russian soldiers were surrounded and captured near Salmijarvi. The detachment may have been part of the parachute infantry which was dropped in that region.

Three Russian bombing planes raided Salmijarvi, where the International Nickel Co. of Canada has properties, but, according to the Finns, did no more damage than to start "a few small fires."

The Soviet planes twice swooped on the town, dropping bombs, but when they returned for a third attack antiaircraft fire winged one bomber which was seen to fall in the mountains. The other two craft fled north.

U. S. Prepares Report on Fist Fight

The State Department prepared yesterday to make a report to the German Embassy on the Armistice Day scrap between a Nazi flier and a local automobile mechanic, as Frank Werner, the mechanic, received the congratulations of a number of World War veterans.

The embassy, insisting that the incident was "an issue between two governments," made a protest to the State Department. According to Mrs. Werner, Peter Reidel, the flier, was knocked down and protested his inability to continue.

Of German Descent

The 128-pound Werner is of Pennsylvania German extraction. His father, Mrs. Werner said, spoke with a German accent.

State Department officials said that as soon as reports are received from the Justice Department and the District Commissioners, to whom the protest was referred, they would be transmitted to the embassy. There was no indicaion that an apology would be made.

Mrs. Werner said a number of persons, including World War veterans, had called, either by telephone or in person, to commend her husband for the way he had used his dukes.

Didn't Do "Enough"

"I was ashamed of the whole thing at first," she declared, "but since it has been made an international incident by an embassy protest, I don't think Mr. Werner did enough."

Since Reidel did not appear at a hearing arranged Monday before Assistant District Attorney Karl Kindleberger, possible action appeared to have reached a stalemate. Kindleberger said nothing could be done unless Reidel made a complaint.

Pan-American Nations United, Berle Warns

Any Attack on One Means Thrust at All, He Advises Forum

Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle warned last night than any foreign attempt to "disrupt or dominate" any one of the 21 American republics "means necessarily an attack on all American nations." At the same time he denounced by inference Russia and Germany for reducing international relations to a "witches' kitchen."

Berle further warned the American hemisphere is firmly united in its will not to permit on this side a repetition of the "tragic spectacle" in Europe where "one small nation after another was first weakened, then attacked and finally submerged by a great power."

He spoke at the chamber of commerce auditorium before the opening session of a three-day forum on protection of Pan-American solidarity sponsored by the Inter-American Center of George Washington University.

Military Advice Pledged

Two other speakers, Brig. Gen. T. V. Strong, assistant chief of staff, and Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, stressed the co-operation of the American nation for defense of the Western Hemisphere. The United States stands ready to help the other republics prepare and strengthen defenses, they said.

In describing the chaos in Europe which forced the American countries to take a "common front" against foreign attack or subversive activities, Berle said:

"We saw a world in which any nation which spoke of peace was promptly maligned as having provoked war; in which simple self-defense was labeled an act of provocation or aggression; in which desire for order was promptly misrepresented as oppression.

"Much of international relations was reduced to a witches' kitchen, in which black became white; religion was a crime; decent, human instincts were merely weakness; justice was a phantom. The enemy of yesterday, about whom no words were too foul, became the trusted ally of today."

Advisory Committee Is Cited

Accordingly, with the outbreak of war in Europe, the American nations took steps to protect its "continental solidarity" and neutrality, Berle pointed out. The Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee was set up to take up the immediate problems of trade readjustment and shipping; and at the same time to arrange for a long-term settlement of economic problems, such as defaulted debts and Mexican seizure of oil.

Berle denied charges the United States was taking advantage of the war in Europe and that the Inter-American economic conference was a strategem to expand its trade in Latin America at the expense of trade rivals.

"Our major problem is to carry the 21 American republics through the war period with a minimum of distress," he asserted.

King George Tours Battlefront, Plods in Mud to Greet Men

Monarch Shakes Hands of Airmen Who Flew Over Germany; French Turn Out To Cheer Royal Procession in Khaki

By Drew Middleton.
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Dec. 5.—King George VI toured part of his army's battlefront today and the British Expeditionary Force turned out in the mud, wind and rain to cheer him.

The royal car, camouflaged and bearing the royal standard as the only bit of color in the khaki-clad procession, covered more than 100 miles in the first day of the monarch's inspection.

The King walked at salute through lines of cheering troops, plodded through the mud to talk to gun crews and climbed ladder-like stairs to the tops of blockhouses for a better view of battle positions.

Clad in a field marshall's uniform, high boots and a trench coat, the monarch started his trip at dawn.

Shakes Airmen's Hands

By midmorning he was deep in the battle sector, inspecting planes and talking with Royal Air Force pilots who had flown over Germany. To each airman he gave a handshake and the quick comment, "Fine work, fine work."

The King was accompanied by Lord Gort, commander-in-chief of the British field forces, and his brother, the Duke of Gloucester.

The French along his route, who learned only last night of his presence among them, were just as excited and far more demonstrative than the British.

Children Wave Flags

School children waving hastily-made Union Jacks and veterans of the World War, wearing faded uniforms, turned out in a dozen hamlets to shout "Vive Le Roi."

Troops from a hundred regiments lined the road. The procession halted wherever they were waiting and the king led the way down the lanes of soldiers. He smiled broadly as officer after officer roared out the traditional "three cheers for his majesty" and then led the soldiers like college cheer leaders.

121 Americans From Finland Reach Sweden

Families of Legation Staff at Stockholm: Officials Remain

By International News Service

Stockholm, Dec. 5.—Two shiploads of refugees from Finland, including 121 Americans among the 500 aboard, reached Stockholm tonight. Among the Americans were the families of members of the United States Legation staff at Helsinki.

According to their statement, the American Legation staff has not departed from Helsinki but remains on duty. United States Minister to Sweden F. A. Sterling met the refugees.

53 on One Ship

Fifty-three American refugees from Helsinki, bombed capital of Finland, have reached Stockholm aboard the Swedish steamer Kastelholm, the State Department was advised by cable last night.

Ten of the 53 are members of the American diplomatic or commercial service.

The American Red Cross notified the department it is ready to offer any relief that may be needed and that a survey is being made of possible Finnish needs of assistance.

Among the refugees were Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Jenson and son, Niels, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Hoover Agrees To Head U. S. Relief for Finns

Accedes to Procope's Request That He Set Up, Coordinate Plan

By the United Press

San Francisco, Dec. 5.—Former President Hoover has undertaken to set up an organization to appeal for and coordinate American contributions for the homeless of Finland, it was disclosed here tonight.

Aroused by Russia's "assault on Finland," and the plight of Finnish women and children driven out of their homes by Soviet bombs, Hoover agreed to the task after a telephone conversation with Mjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister in Washington.

Hoover won fame as chairman of the Commission for the Relief of Belgium during the World War. The task involved not only negotiations of funds among the warring powers and the expenditure of the money, but also the constant necessity for quieting suspicions among the warring nations.

During life of the Belgian relief organization, Hoover directed the expenditure of $928,000 000. He received nothing, either in salary or expense allowance.

It was indicated Minister Procope telephoned Hoover after "having been in communication with the Finnish government."

Hoover, it was learned, will make a statement outlining the Finnish relief organization within a few days. He already has had a large part in organization of the same service for Poland now operating under Chauncey McCormick, of Chicago, as president.

Club to Hear Professor

Dr. W. M. Gewehr, of American University, will speak on "International Relations" at a meeting of the Lyon Village Woman's Club tonight, at 8, in the Clarendon Community House.

Finns Observe 22d Year of Liberty Today

Twenty-two years ago today, the little republic of Finland proclaimed its independence.

The anniversary finds the clean, debt-paying republic in the throes of what may be its death at the hands of her gigantic neighbor, Russia.

It is not a day to be celebrated. Nevertheless, it will be observed in Washington and elsewhere in the United States.

Here persons of Finnish blood will call at the Finnish Legation, 1416 Tracy place northwest, and clasp hands with Minister Hjalmar Procope and other members of the Legation staff.

As Russia seeks to absorb Finland, the legation here is the scene of great activity and heart-touching drama.

Yesterday a man called at the ivy-covered legation. He was plainly dressed and his hands indicated that he had worked hard for a living.

"I am an electrician," he told one of the attaches, "and I'd like to make some contribution to Finland. If there is any work I can do around here, I'd be glad to do it, and it won't cost you a cent."

Minister Procope and the members of the staff said the American's offer was one of a thousand incidents that has indicated this country's sympathy and affection.

Canadian Pact Cutting Prices, Carlson Says

But Others Cite Benefits in Hearing On Uruguay Accord

By the Associated Press

The committee for reciprocity information heard the reciprocal trade treaty program attacked and defended yesterday at a hearing on a proposed agreement with Uruguay.

Representative Carlson (Republican), Kansas, cited instances in which he said selling of Canadian cattle on the St. Paul, Minn., market had depressed United States cattle prices generally.

He said the indirect effect was to discourage packers and others from buying, in the belief prices would decline further. This situation, he said, tended further to depress prices.

Embargo Charged

Alfred H. Benjamin, New York importer and exporter, declared restrictions imposed by Uruguay on imports from the United States amounted to an embargo. He warned against making an agreement with Uruguay when that country's European sources of goods were cut off unless that agreement were to be carried out during peacetime.

Also opposing tariff concessions on imports from Uruguay were F. B. Wise, of Washington, secretary of the Association of American Producers of Domestic Inedible Fats, and Willam S. Snow, of Alexandria, Va., president of the Domestic Fats and Oils Conference.

A. P. Federline and W. T. Miller, of New York, representing the Association of American Soap and Glycerine Producers, Inc., defended the reciprocal trade agreement policy and urged its extention to Uruguay.

Federline declared Uruguayan restrictions of soap imports from the United States were so drastic that these imports had been reduced to practically nothing. Miller said that "Since negotiation of the reciprocal trade agreements with Colombia and Costa Rica, our business there has increased approximately 900 and 400 per cent, respectively.

Hull Goes to Heart of Farm Belt to Defend Trade Pacts, Says Attack on Plan Based on Lie be made to prevail over policies of armed threat and conquest, the only possible outcome would be a major war.

"Our efforts for peace failed. Today a large part of the world is engaged in armed conflict. With the same zeal with which we strove to avert this catastrophe, our Government is now seeking to provide every possible assurance against our being drawn into it. . . . This country should not, and must not, be drawn into war."

He warned that both industry and agriculture must expect to feel the effects of war-time restrictions on trade, though the Government is constantly seeking relaxation of new restrictions.

"But," he said, "there are broader and more far-reaching problems involved. Temporary difficulties must not blind us to the importance of following policies which will both cushion the shock of current developments and enable us to grapple successfully with the colossal problems of the future."

Must Not Repeat Mistakes

He warned that the mistakes made after the World War must no. be repeated. The "obvious need" then, he said, was for restoration of normal and healthy trade relations among nations as "the only possible means of establishing secure foundations for enduring peace and for the economic well-being of the peoples of all nations."

". . . instead, the world pressed headlong down the perilous road of narrow nationalism," Hull said, explaining that the United States and other countries made "grave mistakes of policy (which) contributed during the twenties to the impairment of the whole world economic situation."

Retaliatory tariffs followed the Hawley-Smoot bill, he said, and subsequently there was a heavy slump in American export of farm and other products, accumulation of surpluses, price collapses and unemployment.

"It was to cope with this extreme economic emergency," Hull said, "that Congress enacted the trade-agreements program which, while retaining thoroughly ample safeguards for our domestic producers, is designed to reopen clogged-up channels of mutually beneficial trade between our country and other countries."

Among other things, benefits accruing from trade agreements have helped in disposing of America's agricultural surpluses, Hull said, asserting that between 1935 and 1938 this country's exports of farm products to trade-agreements countries increased by nearly 50 per cent while exports of farm products to other countries declined slightly.

Farm Income Increases

The real test of the trade-agreements program, he said, has been the increase in farm income. Hull asserted that during the first 2½ years after the Hawley-Smoot act became law farm income had fallen to 4.6 billion dollars, but that four years after the trade-agreements policy became effective the income jumped to 7.5 billions, excluding benefit payments.

"If there were the slightest suspicion in my own mind that farmers in this country were being hurt, rather than helped, by the trade-agreements program," Hull said, "I would be the first to favor dropping it . . .

"The notion that farmers can be saved by embargo tariffs is a snare and a delusion . . . when such embargoes are granted generally, the result, as was the case in 1930-32, is a collapse of our foreign trade, vanishing foreign markets for our farm and other surpluses, a prostrate agriculture and a prostrate Nation."

"The best test of the trade agreements policy and its administration is to be found in the 22 agreements already negotiated. No tariff adjustments have been made in our trade agreements without the utmost care to see to it that the branches of production concerned, in agriculture or in industry, are amply safeguarded. What warrant is there for assuming that whatever tariff adjustments may be made in the future will not be as carefully considered and as adequately safeguarded as those made in agreements already negotiated?

"The record of achievement under the trade agreements program is an open book. I invite any person to show a single instance of general tariff readjustment, either upward or downward, in the entire fiscal history of the Nation, wherein there has been exercised as much impartiality, care and accuracy as to facts as has uniformly characterized the negotiation of our 22 trade agreements—or any more solicitude for the welfare of agriculture, labor, business and the population of the country in its entirety."

"Full and stable prosperity for our Nation can be achieved only in a world which is at peace . . . hope of enduring peace among nations is little short of an illusion unless there can be provided for it a solid foundation of economic well-being for all nations. For this, healthy and sound international trade relations are indispensable . . . By adhering to the trade policy which we now follow, we can throw our influence on the side of economic progress and of peace and order—to our immense benefit."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace at the same convention proposed means of making the Government's farm program self-financing after intimating that Congress might not continue grants from the general treasury for increasing farm income to near parity with other groups.

Wallace suggested that one source of funds to provide for parity payments, commodity loans and export subsidies might be the income certificate plan, under which any dealer handling a farm product would be required to buy certificates to cover the amount of the product he desired to sell in the United States.

Another suggested source was a manufacturers' sales tax on luxuries, but Wallace said it might be difficult to earmark funds for producers of a few commodities, or even for agriculture in general.

A third suggestion was that all customs receipts be earmarked for the farm program, but Wallace asserted this source could not be counted upon as a constant source since receipts vary as much and more than $100,000,000 from year to year.

"The solution may have to lie," he said, "in combining two or more of these various methods of raising money."

Japanese Woo U.S. by Paying Damage Claims

Compensation Granted For Destruction of Property in China

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Dec. 5.—Looking toward better relations with the United States, Japan is paying off numerous claims for damages to American property in China, authoritative sources disclosed today.

They said Foreign Minister Nomura informed United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew in a conference yesterday that Japan was prepared to settle such claims.

These sources declared, however, the Japanese disliked use of the United States-Japanese trade treaty as a "club" for influencing policies in China. The treaty, denounced by the United States in July, is due to expire January 26.

Soldiers May Be Disciplined

It was said Grew and Nomura temporarily shelved discussion of such problems as the open door in China and the Nine-Power Treaty, Japan being primarily interested in bridging the period immediately following the treaty's expiration.

For this reason, many long-standing American damage claims for bombings in China are being compensated. It was understood reliably the government soon would enumerate the cases and amounts paid.

This list also probably would include instances of soldiers being disciplined for face-slapping incidents in Tientsin and Hankow.

Turning Elsewhere for Oil

The foreign minister declared, these sources said, that if America placed an embargo on exports to Japan, commodities must be sought elsewhere.

This statement, it was indicated, might mean efforts would be made to obtain more oil, scrap iron and similar items from the East Indies and Australia.

Observers said Japan at present was unable to go beyond specific incidents, as her future policies respecting all third powers in China must be conditioned by the scope of government to be organized in China under Wang Ching-wei.

Services Held In Port Deposit For Dr. Eslin

Funeral services for Dr. B. J. Eslin, 73, former Washington dentist, were held Saturday in Port Deposit, Md. Dr. Eslin died Thursday at the home of friends in Port Deposit. Burial was in Glenwood Cemetery here.

Born on the old Eslin estate on Columbia road, which had been in his family more than 100 years, Dr. Eslin lived in the District until 1933, when he moved to Arlington, Mass.

He received his doctor's degree in dentistry from George Washington University in 1888, and was engaged in active practice until 1919. He is survived by a son, Dr. Welvile P. Eslin, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Agnes Cashell, of Astoria, Long Island.

win the war for the Allies, the foreign minister asserted.

He asserted that Russia's invasion of Finland had justified Britain's attitude in the unsuccessful Anglo-French-Soviet negotiations preceding the outbreak of the war.

Britain "refused an agreement with the Soviet government on terms of formulas covering cases of aggression on the Baltic states," he said.

At the time of the Anglo-French Soviet talks in Moscow the Soviets were said to have demanded British and French consent to a plan whereby the three powers would intervene in event of either "direct or indirect aggression" in any of the Baltic states.

G. O. P. Chiefs To Meet Here

Thomas E. Dewey, fresh from his maiden Minneapolis speech; Senator Taft, of Ohio, rounding up a circle stumping tour; Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan; Senator Minority Leader McNary and House Republican Leader Martin.

No decision on the President's suggestion for delaying both party campaigns and conventions will be made until the G. O. P. national committee meets some time next month. Meanwhile, party spokesmen called it a safe bet that the issues would be thoroughly, if informally, threshed out at a long round of private week-end conferences.

While the business of tomorrow's Republican executive committee meetings was narrowed to the routine agenda of finance, research, publicity and women's departmental reports, there also the big campaign issues will be the subject of more than one off-the-record tete-a-tete.

Speeches to Be Analyzed

Hot off the press will be New York District Attorney Dewey's Minneapolis bid for the G. O. P. nomination to be appraised for its political strong and weak points. The speech-making record of two other announced candidates, Senators Taft and Bridges, of New Hampshire, will be up for analysis. As much in the race, although as yet unannounced, the name and record of Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, will come up for more than casual discussion.

There is little the committee can do for candidates, who prior to the convention are "on their own." The big and pressing party question to be answered (the problem will be passed on to the January National Committee meeting) is when and where the 1940 G. O. P. convention will be held.

Before Republicans answer that one they want to know what the Democratic National Committee is going to do about conventions. They are likely to remain waiting. No date has been set for the Democratic committee meeting, and the jockeying for convention positions to come later may well go to a preliminary test in a duel over dates of national committee meetings.

Hamilton Wants Delay

Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee wants to delay the Republican convention until after the Democratic slate is chosen, but the suggestion emanating from the President for campaign delays dashed cold water on his hopes. Most Republicans admit that the Democrats, if they want to, can outwait the Republicans on choice of convention dates.

Business highlight of tomorrow's executive committee meeting is expected to be the financial report of National Treasurer C. B. Goodspeed, with his and local committee recommendations for raising funds to wipe out the deficit. Goodspeed will report that the party deficit, which stood at $1,200,000 at the close of the 1936 campaign, has been scaled down to $700,000, despite intervening Congressional campaign and organization expenses.

Roosevelt Asks Aid for Finns

neutrality act would not be invoked for the time being.

Regarding proposed severance of diplomatic relations with Russia, Mr. Roosevelt himself said there was no news at present, but he did not know about the future.

He responded sarcastically to critics of the Administration's foreign policies and said the stand maintained to date had the approval of most Americans.

Criticisms have come largely, he said, from the Soviet press, a portion of the Nazi press, the publicity director for the Republican National Committee (Franklyn Waltman) whose name he said he did not recall, and the Hearst papers, all of which, he said, are substantially in accord in the attacks. Criticism has come also from statesmen in Russia, some in Germany and a comparatively small number of politically minded people in the United States House and Senate, the President continued.

He concluded that the foreign policies that Secretary of State Hull is carrying out from day to day must be pretty good.

The Finnish debt suggestion, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized, was entirely on the initiative of this Government. No request had come from Finland for any such relief.

Might Be Used for Refugees

Asked if Russia might regard the step as an unneutral act, the President replied sharply in the negative. He said the questioner presupposed that the money would be used to send airplanes with which to fight the Russians. Then he mentioned that it might be used to provide assistance for the wounded and refugees.

Finland has paid the United States $5,656,598 of principal and interest on an original $10,000,000 debt. How much of this Mr. Roosevelt contemplates utilizing now for Finnish assistnce was not indicated.

Earlier yesterday, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said at his press conference the United States had notified certain Latin-American nations it would be glad to participate in a joint Pan American condemnation of the Russian invasion.

Argentina Backs Move

Buenos Aires, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Argentina tonight indorsed plans for a joint American declaration condemning Russia's invasion of Finland, and awaited reaction from other League of Nations members to her demand that the Soviet Union be expelled from the Geneva body.

No official comment was available regarding indications that the Chilean government would remain aloof from moves to condemn Russia, but it was reported reliably that a joint protest would be issued against the Soviet Union if a majority of the 21 New World nations were favorable.

Peru Condemns Invasion

Lima, Peru, Dec. 5 (AP).—Enrique Goytisolo, Peru's foreign minister, condemned tonight the Russian invasion of Finland, calling it a "flagrant disregard of the right of an organized people, legally established and free," to life and sovereignty.

The foreign minister, commenting on a movement among Pan-American nations to denounce the Russian action, said Peru "believes this condemnation is in accordance with the American legal tradition and loyalty to the principles which were the basis of the constitution of the League of Nations."

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 5 (AP).—Foreign Minister Abraham Ortega, replying tonight to an invitation from Peru, Bolivia and Uruguay to join an American protest against the invasion of Finland, declared Chile is not interested in "mixing" in the affairs of other continents.

He told ambassadors of the three countries Chile's foreign policy centers in the Americas, and that there is no precedent for the proposed protest since American nations have not protested moves against Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and other countries.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Housekeeper's Daughter' Is a Very Goofy Gal!

New Hal Roach Comedy on the Wacky Side; 'Abe Lincoln' World Premiere Here, Jan. 22; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

WITH HIS UNPREDICTABLE penchant for goofy comedy, Hal Roach has hit a new high in "The Housekeeper's Daughter," coming to the Palace screen on Friday.

Out of the book by Donald Henderson Clarke, the adventurous and unconventional Mr. Roach has plucked a squad of impossible newspaper people, a pseudo-scientist, turned cub reporter; a gang of very tough hoodlums that no one takes seriously—except a few of their victims—the lady of the title and her ma, a dopey little guy who sells flowers and poisons coffee, and a couple of upper-drawer aristocrats, shaken them together in a newspaper city room, a houseboat and a palatial home and come up with a spicy concoction the like of which has never been reciped before.

BELL

The point of the whole thing is that after dreaming up a completely cockeyed solution of a baffling murder mystery, the bungling newshounds sober up long enough to discover that they really have hit upon the truth and rounded up a mob of as vicious gorillas as you would care not to meet up a dark alley.

While the cast is studded with such names as Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan, Donald Meek, Peggy Wood, George E. Stone, Lillian Bond, Luis Alberni and others of high repute, it is notable also for bringing out into the light talents that are new, or at least never before so prominently displayed. John Hubbard, for example, executes an extremely nice chore in the role of the hapless young man who doesn't know what it is all about until his crazy ideas come out right side up. Marc Lawrence, who never has been listed among the cinema's foremost thugs, is almost a Humphrey Bogart as the "lame brains" of the gunmen, and Victor Mature—whose reputation assuredly isn't—does a handsome job as his slightly palsied right hand.

It will be of interest to the old-timers of the theater—especially those who grew up on the old two-a-day vaudeville—that John Hyams and Leila McIntyre are briefly, but humorously, cast as the owners of the mansion that is almost blown apart by the play's explosive climax into which they innocently stumble.

For those who seek credibility, rationality or even sanity in their film fare, Mr. Roach's highly seasoned mulligan is not the dish. If it is a little lunatic hilarity you are after, "The Housekeeper's Daughter" is just what the dietitian ordered.

Yesterday's preview screening of the Roach whimsy was preceded by two short-reels. One was an eminently reassuring subject in the "Adventures of a Cameraman" series, bearing the title of "Sky Fighters," and went pretty thoroughly through the curriculum of those hardy young men who will defend America in the air, if the necessity ever arises. It left scant doubt of the sort of job they will do. The other was a brief flash of that placekick for a field goal, in the Giants-Redskins imbroglio at the Polo Grounds last Sunday, and left the question precisely where it was before. Some of the pictures of the game may make clear whether the "boot" was Bo Russell's or Bill Halloran's, but this particular footage was not it.

So, between the preceding paragraph and this one, a quick dash to the Carlton Hotel for a press powwow with RKO-Radio's high command, or an appreciable part of it, in the persons of Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, associate producers; S. Barrett McCormick, national director of advertising and publicity, and James M. Brennan, division manager of RKO-Keith theaters.

The subject of the parley was the world premiere of the film version of Robert E. Sherwood's magnificent drama of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," starring Raymond Massey—as did the stage play—scheduled for RKO-Keith's Theater in this city on Monday night, January 22.

The single world premiere presentation on the night of January 22 will transcend anything the Capital has seen in the manner of launching a picture under most distinguished auspices. Thereafter, the picture will be shown on the usual continuous-performance policy, but at an increase over the usual scale of prices. For this long-run engagement, the seats will be scaled to a 75-cent top at matinees and a $1 top at night. These are bargain prices for a screen subject of the importance of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," since the celluloid version, according to every reliable authority, excels the stage version in every particular.

This should not be construed as an implication that Producers Max Gordon and Harry Goetz have tampered with Mr. Sherwood's memorable play in any way. They have filmed the Sherwood script exactly as it was written, but have magnified it in visual scope to conform to the vast flexibility and variety of scene of which the cinema is capable.

It would be a good idea to draw a red ring around the date of January 22 on your calendar right now.

It was pleasant to learn from Max Gordon that his stage production of the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein musical, "Very Warm for May," is doing nicely in New York. Despite mixed notices upon its Broadway opening, it is repeating the history of "Roberta," "The Great Waltz," and others of its predecessors under the same aegis, by gradually growing into the hit class. The book of the piece, incidentally, has been drastically revised since the Washington opening at the National. The gangsters have been completely eliminated from the plot, along with one of the three ballets, which were always one too many. One suspects that Vincente Minnelli, who staged the version the Capital saw, wouldn't know the old girl now.

If you want to see the National Screen Council's selection as the outstanding film among the November releases, and winner of the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for that month, you still have time to hurry down to Loew's Palace Theater. The picture so honored is the superb Twentieth Century-Fox filmization of Walter D. Edmond's novel of "Drums Along the Mohawk," co-starring Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

No need to go farther than the marquee sign on the Central Theater, on Ninth street, today to find this eloquent double-feature booking:

Carroll's First Hit Revived by Blackfriars

'Shadow and Substance' Opens Three-Night Run at St. Paul's

Paul Vincent Carroll week in Washington continued last night with the first of three performances of "Shadow and Substance," by the Blackfriars' Guild at St. Paul's auditorium.

Mr. Carroll's eloquent predecessor to "The White Steed," currently at the National, was widely applauded when it made its first American appearance two years ago and last night only substantiated the opinion that "Shadow and Substance" is one of the most stirring and finely written dramas of our time. It would be utterly ridiculous to compare the Blackfriars' production with the memorable cast which was headed by Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Julie Haydon and Sara Allgood. That it continued to possess beauty and pungency, that an audience which did not know the play gained its acquaintance is ample reward for a sincere and careful performance.

Ted Field had the trying role of the classical Canon Skerritt and played with dignity and humor. It was a superlatively acceptable interpretation, by far the best work this local young actor has revealed.

Real Character Resurrected

Jonathan Swift, yes, the creator of the unhappy Gulliver, was the inspiration for Carroll's Canon Skerritt. The Dean, too, was unhappy in Ireland and had furious contempt for the gullibilities of the people who were forced upon him. The playwright has resurrected Dean Swift, made him a modern, learned interpreter of Catholicism and pitched him into the intellectual upheavals of modern Eire. The characters around him are the troubles that beset the land, which Carroll has personified in Brigid, while the Canon and the rebel schoolmaster represent the forces which crush Brigid between them.

This battle of ideas personified so brilliantly in the characters was the chief fascination for last night's audience, which definitely felt the play to be the thing. One must regret the Blackfriars' excisions in several scenes, but it nonetheless is a production that one who has not yet come to know "Shadow and Substance" will find an amply rewarding evening.

Excellent Supporting Cast

Helen Johnson's portrayal of that delicate mystic, Brigid, was, if anything a shade too pallid a role that would be killed with a feather-weight of overplaying. She spoke so softly as to be indistinct, but she erred on the right side. William Draper's O'Flingsley, the schoolmaster, was forceful and well-spoken. Gertrude Heagney brought a careful brogue to her Miss Cooney. William W. Flynn and Leon J. Norris were the oafish curates, with Flynn gaining laughs for his football activities. The dim-witted Francis Ignatius spouted ill-pronounced Latin in the capable person of Robert J. Lucey and Margaret Collins' laughter etched her Thomasina with humor. Hugh Smythe and Mary C. Fitzgerald completed the cast.

The Rev. Brenden Larnen, O. P., directed the production, which will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 5 (1939).—The most exciting movie news I've heard from Hollywood is that Greta Garbo will do the Jane Cowl role in "The Road to Rome," with Ernst Lubitsch directing. This means, my friends, that Greta will continue to be smooth, gay and sophisticated just as she was in "Ninotchka." What a furore that picture is creating in the East, breaking records everywhere. The "Laughing Garbo" is ten times more popular with the fans than the sombre lady she used to be.

LOUELLA PARSONS

In "The Road to Rome" Greta will portray the alluring Roman Queen who journeys out with her royal entourage to try her wiles on the conquering Hannibal, who is camped right at the gates of Rome. The Robert Sherwood play was one of Jane Cowl's greatest hits and Garbo should be wonderful in the romantic satire. Very smart, I say, of M-G-M to assign the directorial job to Lubitsch, for he proved in "Ninotchka" he understands the new Garbo perfectly.

Sam Goldwyn and Twentieth Century-Fox are certainly in a star-trading mood. Early in February, Twentieth's pride and joy, Alice Faye, goes to the Goldwyn lot to be costarred with Zorina in "Natchez," which Sam is plotting as one of the biggest musicals in 1940. This deal follows on the heels of T. C. F.'s taking over from Sam the entire production of "Sweetheart of Turret One," including the star, Jon Hall—and unless my spies are wrong, there will be an announcement of still another big trading deal between these studios in a day or so. Of course, Alice will be the singing star and Zorina the dancing star of "Natchez," the Joseph Hergesheimer yarn about the gambling days on the Mississippi. Jo Swerling is already scripping the story, so it will be ready for Sam Wood to direct after he completes "Our Town."

After our last show last night, I went over to see Ruth Chatterton and Lila Lee, who are playing here at the Nixon Theater. Ruth's old friend, John Van Druten, has made many changes in the play, "Twilight We Dance" and the new version opens in Philadelphia tomorrow. They are playing the original play on the stage here and rehearsing the new one far into the night. If there are any talent scouts in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, take a tip from me and have a look at young Jimmy Boland, Shirley Pelzier and Tenia Thayer. They are clever youngsters and each one a movie bet if I ever saw one. Auriele Lee staged the play and trained these children.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Pittsburgh collected at random: Took a walk down the street and saw a sign "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"—this year's academy award winner! Everybody here wants Jimmy to get it and hundreds of questions have come to me asking if I believe he has a chance; is Rudy Vallee cutting out Dennis O'Keefe with Pate Dane? Ken Murray certainly gets around. His latest enthusiasm is pretty little Brenda Joyce; Merle Oberon is blue again because Alexander Korda is on his way to New York and then to England on the Atlantic Clipper; Verbena Hebbard's birthday party for the senior Atwater Kents brought out a lot of movie people, including Conrad Nagel, Irene Dunne, Rudy Vallee, Mary Pickford and Robert Stack and Cobina Wright, jr.

Bobby Breen is a busy boy rehearsing young Christmas carolers, and if they earn any money over the holidays they'll turn it over to charity; Bill and Edith Goetz leave Hollywood tomorrow for a jaunt to New York to see the new shows; Jan Garber celebrates his twentieth anniversary as a band-leader at Topsy's Cafe tomorrow night; the cutest story I've heard is about the "crush" Jackie Cooper developed on Claire Windsor at La Quinta, following her around everywhere; Phyllis Brooks and Lee Bowman, attracting a lot of attention in Hollywood when they walked into the tropics; seems I'm always hearing about some of our Hollywood people who hailed from Pittsburgh. Dick Powell for many years was master of ceremonies at the Stanley Theater. It was here Warners found him and sent him to Hollywood.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 5.

When occasionally I'm engulfed in a wave of self-pity, I can usually check it by thinking of the luncheon I had the other day with Connie Boswell. You've all heard her sing, and you know her story. But her spirit is something to shout about. When news got out that she was beginning to walk again, which wasn't true, she had thousands of telegrams and letters asking about it. She said: "My neighbors kept eying me—I thought any minute they were going to ask me to run down to the corner and buy a paper for them." But she does ride and swim, because she rented a place by mistake that had a pool. "And I just hated to see all that water go to waste," said Connie; so she took up swimming. She's an expert cellist, does all her own arranging, and her diet when she sings is very strange. For breakfast has leg of lamb or chicken and green salad. Then takes nothing but coffee until after she's finished singing. After which she tucks away one of the biggest steaks you've ever seen. Her records outsell any other feminine singer. Yes, the best cure for the blues is a chat with Connie Boswell.

HOPPER

Harry Conn has been denying until he's blue in the face that Columbia Studio is not for sale. But he can't deny that he's sold the script of "Arizona" to Metro—and Wes Ruggles, who was to make it for Harry, will do the same job at Metro with Clark Gable as the star—instead of Cary Grant . . .

It was a surprising sight to see Willie Bioff, whose name has been in a lot of papers lately, walk into Perino's, our swankiest restaurant, filled with the social elite of the town, and sit down uninvited at Walter Wanger's table while Willie waited for Pat Casey, another labor leader, to have lunch with him.

With millions of kids all over the world crying for milk, there's no grief so poignant as that of a Hollywood press agent when a star's pedigreed pup has a tummy ache. Incidentally, this is the reason Bette Davis gave up the presidency of the Tailwaggers. She loves dogs, so do we, but feels it's very bad for everyone concerned (even the dogs) to get publicity when there's so much starvation and grief in the world . . .

There's a little drug store in Fremont, Ohio, where an old textbook is prominently displayed. It's owned by Dr. W. F. Bates and belonged to a schoolmate of his. The name written on the front page: William Clark Gable . . . Hollywood sights: Vera Vague, Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Rochester and Johnny Weismuller having fun (and losing weight at the same time) at a Vine street bowling alley . . . Here's a case of an actor taking his screen roles so seriously that he is carrying it into his private life. Jeffrey Lynn in "Four Daughters" was a musician, also in "Four Wives," and in "And It All Came True" he's a composer. Now he's taking piano lessons seriously and will probably sing in his next . . . The Metro gang is on another buying spree—Bob Taylor, Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable and Wally Beery all bought themselves new cars on the same day.

At lunch the other day, Jack La Rue complained that since he's played gangsters, he's always associated with the underworld. He's stopped frequently by cops, demanding to see his license. Which reminded me of what an Eastern friend said to me: "Talk about gangsters in New York and Chicago. Why, in two days here, I saw more murderers, racketeers and triggermen at Hollywood and Vine than you'd find in a Rogue's Gallery. They must be good actors when you'd rather see 'em on the screen than meet them on the street!" . . .

The Gangsters' Lovely Nemesis

JOAN BENNETT, cast as the brunette siren, who knows all the important answers, in Hal Roach's comedy-melodrama of "The Housekeeper's Daughter," coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for its premiere in the Capital on Friday

Star's Film Baby Recalls the Past

Priscilla Lane now firmly believes that our terrestrial sphere is truly "a small world." She just played screen mother to the baby of a former schoolmate.

Of ten infants brought to the studio to appear in hospital nursery scenes of "Four Wives," 5-week-old Charlene Kaye Getty was chosen to be Miss Lane's baby. After the selection, Charlene's real mother spoke to the star.

"Do you remember a Ralph Getty who went to school with us in Indianola, Iowa?" she asked.

Miss Lane did. They had gone through grammar school together and were in the same class at Indianola High School.

"Well, said the mother, "He is my husband, Charlene's father."

Congressmen Will Join in Iglesias Cortege

Group Will Conduct Commissioner's Body To Puerto Rico Home

Congress will honor a representative of Puerto Rico who rose from the ranks of labor to that of his country's envoy.

IGLESIAS

A committee of Senators and Representatives tomorrow will accompany the body of Resident Commissioner Santiago Iglesias from New York to his native island.

The 67-year-old commissioner and distinguished Latin American labor leader died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after a week's illness. He contracted malaria on a recent trip to Mexico where he attended several labor meetings.

Appointed by Sergeant at Arms of the House Kenneth Romney, in the absence of Speaker Bankhead, who is in Florida, the House members of the committee will include Representatives Marvin Jones, of Texas; Lex Green, of Florida; Joe L. Smith, of West Virginia, and W. Sterling Cole, of New York. Sergeant at arms of the Senate Chesley W. Jurney has not yet announced the two Senators who will accompany the body and family.

Two Senators to Go

Romney stated yesterday that the party would arrive in Puerto Rico Monday, and the funeral services would probably be Tuesday.

Born in Spain, Mr. Iglesias migrated to Puerto Rico as a child, and was apprenticed to a cabinet maker at the age of 12. In 1898 he founded a workers' federation on the island, and in 1901 the late Samuel Gompers appointed him chief organizer of the American Federation of Labor for Puerto Rico and Cuba.

Mr. Iglesias founded and edited three labor newspapers in Puerto Rico. He was elected to the island Senate in 1917, and was reelected every four years up to 1932. Since 1925 he had been secretary to the Pan American Federation of Labor.

Shot by Nationalist

In 1936 Mr. Iglesias was shot and slightly wounded by a Nationalist while he was making a speech at San Juan.

He named seven of his eight daughters America, Equality, Justice, Liberty, Light, Peace and Fraternity. Surviving, besides his daughters and wife, whom he married in 1902, are three sons, Santiago, jr., Manolin and Eduardo.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes said yesterday he was "deeply shocked over the news of Commissioner Iglesias' death.

President Roosevelt yesterday expressed sorrow at learning of the death of Commissioner Iglesias. "He was a very old friend of mine," said the President. "I had known him for a good many years."

Air Raid Huts Put on Bridge Of British Ship

Liner Scythia Slips Into New York With 25 Americans Aboard

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Dec. 5.—Bringing a grim innovation for world mercantile ships in the form of huge, twin air-raid shelters of steel, built on the wing tips of her navigating bridge, the Cunard White Star Liner Scythia slipped into New York today.

She brought 25 Americans among her 218 passengers from the war zone.

General Evangeline Booth, retired head of the Salvation Army, returned on the liner, avowedly mentally and physically weary after serving the organization for a half-century.

The Scythia was the second liner arriving today from the combat area, the Holland-America liner Statendam having brought 1,166 passengers, including 207 Americans and 800 German refugees.

Many passengers told of the three-day journey from Rotterdam to Southampton, when it was compulsory for all to carry or wear lifebelts at all times.

Fashioned of three-quarter inch steel, the air-bomb huts, dubbed "pill" boxes by the ship's crew, stand 7 feet in height. There are four eye-slits in the steel, which permit one to three officers to keep watch.

Another safety measure first installed on this ship, in addition to her defense and aircraft guns, sandbags, rafts and buff paint, was a combination steel semaphore signal, similar to those employed by railroads. They are for identification purposes.

Guard Has Vacancies

Richmond, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller has reported there are some 351 vacancies in the Virginia National Guard remaining to be filled under the program to bring 951 new men into the organization.

fic signals, but it would be worth while.

"Couldn't Be Worse"

"It certainly couldn't make conditions any worse. I don't like to take issue with Mr. Van Duzer. I have full confidence in him as a traffic engineer. But I would like to see the experiment made."

Wender said he has always favored stepping up the speed limit on through streets that are protected from cross traffic by signal lights.

"Certainly, if pedestrian control continues to operate as well as it has there can be no danger in raising the speed limit to 30 miles an hour on such streets as Thirteenth and Sixteenth streets northwest. The experience of New York City with express highways shows that the danger of accidents is practically nil."

Wender congratulated The Post for its recent series of 10 articles reporting results of an extensive survey on traffic lights and their relation to delay and congestion. The articles advocated an increased speed limit on certain major streets and longer signal cycles during rush hours.

Italians Send Finns 50 Planes

yesterday and the remainder today.

Finnish circles inclined to the belief that they were flown to Helsinki from Italian fields. Shipping of the planes by sea, it was explained, would require a check of cargo at Franco-British control points at Gibraltar and in the North Sea, and the probable seizure of the cargo by Allied contraband control. Allied practice in these cases, it was said, is to seize any munitions of war that might find their way into the enemy hands.

Further Demonstrations

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Dec. 5.—Further demonstrations of support for Finland and of hostility toward Russia today were accompanied by ever-strengthening reports that Italian pilots have gone to Finland to fly the Italian planes which the Finnish government has acquired.

Hundreds of students sought to enlist in the Finnish army. Applications poured into the Finnish legation and many young Italians appeared in person to offer their services. Finnish Minister Eero Jarnefelt told them their services would be gladly accepted if they found means of reaching Finland.

Thousands May Volunteer

Officially the government is taking no action, but it does seem that the authorities are not making any objections to Italians volunteering for service with the Finns, provided they do their enlisting outside of Italy.

There is no question that thousands of Italians would spontaneously and genuinely volunteer to fight for the Finns. There would not have to be any recruiting this time.

Today was a hectic day in Rome with the students in a rather irrepressible mood. They swept up street after street trying to get at the Soviet Embassy which had an unusually heavy guard that included armed troops. Extra contingents of carabinieri were posted in many outlying squares to break up any groups that might start to form.

Once a crowd of about 500 marched up the Via Veneto, past the American consulate, shouting "Down with Russia!" "Finland Resist!" They also chered for the United States for its expressions of sympathy for Finland.

Air Called Crucial

Italians feel that the Finns could hold their own if they only had an air force that could oppose the Russian air force.

"The overwhelming inferiority of the Finns is in the air and that may compromise everything," writes the Corriere della Sera this morning. "That means that if the powers directly interested in saving Finland help in supplying them with airplanes and pilots, it would provide an immense relief for that little race which is being attacked."

Weak City Governments

Ohio's relief crisis seems to boil down to a failure of local government. The reasons for that failure are not entirely clear. Gov. Bricker contends that the cities have not done all in their power to meet their own relief needs. Mayor Burton, of Cleveland, replies that the city has gone as far in its efforts to relieve hunger and want as State legislation permits.

It would be rash for an outsider to attempt to untangle these conflicting claims. But it is easy to see what the result will be if State and local authorities fail to solve this problem by local action. Already the Federal Government is increasing its aid to Ohio cities. Efforts are being made to create a larger number of WPA jobs in centers where destitution is most acute, and surplus commodities are being rushed in by Federal agencies.

States throughout the country ought to realize that failure to solve their own social problems will inevitably accentuate the trend toward concentration of power in Washington. If the States wish to arrest that movement, they must assume responsibility for the welfare of their own citizens. Crises in the administration of relief or other functions of local communities lead inevitably to an extension of Federal powers, with consequent further weakening of local responsibility.

It is up to the States to break this vicious circle. Gov. Bricker may properly apply pressure upon the cities to eliminate chiselers from their relief rolls. Probably Cleveland, like most other cities, has been negligent in administration of its relief system. As matters stand, however, the Governor is giving some of the cities in Ohio a good excuse to throw up their hands and cry for aid from Columbus or Washington.

Cleveland is asking not only for more money from the State capital, but also for increased taxing powers. There will be a great deal of sympathy with Gov. Bricker's demand that "local needs be taken care of at home to a greater and greater extent." But that involves also greater authority for the cities to grapple with their own problems. The weakness of the Governor's position is that the State has not cleared the way for the city to meet the obligation he thinks it should assume.

Ohio is only one of many States which needs a more efficient and responsible type of municipal government to manage the complicated affairs of large industrial cities. Adjustment of local regimes to these requirements would be a far more effective deterrent to the growth of Federal power than mere protests to Washington.

A Test Of Justice

It is not an easy task for judges to condemn a fellow member of the bench for selling justice or for other wrongdoing. The men who preside over courts are as human as the rest of us. They realize that the conviction of one judge may at first glance seem a reflection upon the courts in general. And they can scarcely avoid a fraternal sympathy for one of their own number.

In this respect the Federal courts in New York, as well as former Judge Martin T. Manton, have been on trial recently. The public has watched eagerly to see how the judicial system would deal with one of its own trusted officials who stooped to the acceptance of bribes. Some perhaps questioned whether our law-enforcement system would prove strong enough to turn upon corruption in its own household and mete out stern justice to a former dispenser of justice.

So there is the more reason for satisfaction in the decision of a specially constituted Federal court of appeal that former Judge Manton was rightfully convicted. Judges who had been directly associated with Manton stepped aside and his appeal was heard by Justice Harlan F. Stone of the Supreme Court, former Justice George Sutherland and Judge Charles E. Clark of the Circuit Court of Appeals. Like Judge Chestnut of the trial court, this special tribunal rendered its judgment with complete and admirable detachment and objectivity.

There is a sharp contrast between this fine example of judicial conduct and the action of Judge James C. Wilson in Houston last month. That jurist stopped the trial of a "hot oil" case and permitted two defendants to change their pleas to nolo contendere after informing attorneys that he wished to avoid the introduction of evidence and circumstances which might reflect upon the Federal judiciary.

If the people ever lose confidence in their courts, democracy will be in peril. There are few, if any, more important functions of government than to keep the judicial system operating smoothly and free from taint of corruption. Undoubtedly the judges who handled the Manton case have a keen realization of that necessity. Their conduct has given due emphasis to the statement in Justice Sutherland's opinion: "Judicial action, whether just or unjust, right or wrong, is not for sale."

They have restored the confidence in our judicial system which Judge Manton's unscrupulous conduct tended to undermine.

Appeal To The League

Finland's appeal to the League of Nations seems, at first glance, a rather despairing gesture. Even when its strength was still unimpaired, as at the time of the Manchurian crisis of 1931 or the Ethiopian crisis of 1935, the Geneva agency proved incapable of restraining a powerful aggressor. It is very much weaker today.

That fact is certainly no secret to the Helsinki government, nor to the governments of the remaining League members. They know that the efforts made to restrain Japan, and the more heroic attempt to impose sanctions on Italy, have had no counterpart in recent years. The Spanish issue was the last great issue of political importance even to be given a hearing at Geneva and in that case the problem was actually referred to the nonintervention committee in London. Since then the League has preserved an almost unbroken silence. The destruction of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, of Albania and of Poland, occurred with the League apparently too impotent to protest.

Yet the League is not dead. Its pulse has been reduced to a feeble flicker but has not stopped. For this very reason many who have the future of international organization at heart have reasoned that, for the time being, it would be suicidal for the League to act on any great issue of international moment. Its machinery can be kept intact for future use, they argue, only if it is kept wholly neutral, meaning inactive, at the present time.

It must be assumed, therefore, that the Finns have little expectation that the League will attempt to impose sanctions against Russia. Nor can they bank on the belief that a League meeting, by mobilizing world public opinion against the Soviet Union, will now restrain Moscow. Actually world public opinion is already all but universally hostile to the Kremlin for its brutal and wholly unprovoked aggression against the little Baltic democracy.

Yet the League might help Finland in one of two ways. If there were even the slightest disposition in Moscow to permit impartial mediation of Russia's demands, such mediation could best be carried out under the auspices of Geneva. And if Russia rejects the League as an agency of mediation, as seems certain, the League can still be used as an agency through which certain of the members might extend collective aid to Finland as a victim of an aggression more cynical and inexcusable than any heretofore recorded.

There is, indeed, a paradoxical gain in the fact that the League is so weak today that it can hardly become any weaker. It can act, therefore, without fear that such action will antagonize those of its powerful former members which have now resigned. It can still serve as a vehicle of that form of moral condemnation which, as the Acting Secretary of State said yesterday, might seem desirable as a joint declaration by the American republics, many of them also members of the League. The time is more than ripe for such a tonic action.

Mystery A La Mode

The death at the age of 70 of Henry Stevens, of Lavallette, N. J., leaves alive only two of the principal actors in the most fantastic murder-mystery drama in the history of American criminal trials.

Some connoisseurs of murder, like Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes and the late Edmund Pearson, may prefer the classic outlines of the Lizzie Borden case of the 1890's. But for a perfect amalgam of sex, horror high life and religiosity, there has been nothing, and perhaps never will be, to compare with the Hall-Mills case of the roaring 1920's.

In the Borden case there was much evidence to indicate that the prim and pious Lizzie had indeed hacked her father and stepmother to death, but none to indicate she had any motive for doing it. This missing motive Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes recently undertook to supply in a brilliant tour de force of psychological exploration.

But in the Hall-Mills case it was pretty much the other way 'round. There was plenty of motive, or at least what a generation nursed on popularizations of Freud accepted as motive, but very little evidence. That little rested principally on the story of one Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," about what she had seen and heard on one of her nocturnal rides on muleback in the moonlight.

Her tale seemed plausible for no better reason than that the "pig woman" herself was, as a character, so wholly incredible. To an imagination that could reconcile itself with the notion of Nemesis in such a guise, all the rest seemed the essence of logic.

The murdered bodies of a clergyman and a choir singer, with whom he had had an adulterous relationship, had been discovered under a crabapple tree. What could be more natural to the tabloid mentality than that the injured wife should have conspired with her wealthy and respectable relatives to avenge her, especially since one of them, Henry Stevens, was known to be a firearms expert, and another, Willie Stevens, had a fondness for running to fires? The jury, however, acquitted all the defendants.

In the 1890's it seemed incredible that a girl so active in church work as Lizzie Borden should be a murderess. In the 1920's many were ready to believe that, given a motive, a clergyman's wife could not be anything else. Today in either case, we should no doubt suspect that an international spy ring was mixed up in the business somehow. So perhaps each generation gets the kind of murder mysteries it deserves.

The Facts Are Wanted

The British Foreign Office is said to be considering publication of a "white paper" which would contain the documentary evidence explaining the collapse of the Anglo-French negotiations with Russia last spring and summer. Such a publication would be of extraordinary value at this time.

Russia's imperialistic designs in Scandinavia are not of recent origin. They have been known, at least in a general way, since the beginning of May, when Maxim Litvinoff was dismissed as Commissar for Foreign Affairs. At that time the Russian Foreign Office and diplomatic service was purged of all officials who advocated resistance to German expansion. And the way was thereby paved for a joint Nazi-Communist program of aggression.

At that time, however, the Communist government was prepared to sell itself to the highest bidder. If the British and French had been willing to underwrite Soviet annexations in eastern Poland, the reduction of Estonia and Latvia to puppet status, and the seizure of strategic points in Finland, then Russia would undoubtedly have been willing to ally itself against Germany. As we said in these columns on May 12, it was then true that "Soviet policy is clearly designed to bring pressure on the British and French to offer Russia whatever she may demand as the price of her support."

Chamberlain and Daladier, however, refused to buy Russian support at the expense of the bolshevization of the Baltic states, which is the reason why Communists everywhere are now under orders to denounce British and French "imperialism." So Stalin, unable to get what he wanted from London and Paris, calmly offered his support to Berlin.

Hitler, believing that a Russo-German pact would give him Danzig and western Poland without a war, quickly agreed to the price which Great Britain and France had found too high. And the Fuehrer is at least loyally upholding his side of the bargain by now seeking to justify his Communist partner's onslaught against Finland.

There is little doubt that the archives of the British Foreign Office contain documentary evidence to show that, for much the same price, Stalin would have sided against Hitler as cheerfully as he now performs the reverse action. And as Lord Halifax suggested yesterday, the time approaches when it will be good policy for the British to place this story of Russian morality on the record, regardless of the resentment such disclosures will arouse in Moscow.

The German people are none too happy about the alliance with what their Fuehrer used to denounce as "the subhuman forces of Bolshevism." They will not be any happier if they gradually come to realize that Hitler has been the victim of a deal with Communism too raw for the British and French to tolerate, even at Germany's expense.

King George of Great Britain has declined to select the campus beauty for the South Carolina University annual. No doubt the King figures that one war at a time is enough.

The letter "e" (or its phonetic equivalent) occurs most frequently in all languages. Through a strange coincidence, the "e" sound is also predominant in the jabberings of monkeys.

"Well, Hardly Ever" . . .

William Allen White, in the Emporia Gazette.

WE GENERALLY abstain from the use of the word "damn" in this paper. We should like to get from our preacher special dispensation to use it today and then eschew it for the next 10 years.

The reason we want to use the word "damn" is that we desire to say in homely language that "of all the damn fool things that have occupied the news columns of the American daily press for the last two weeks, the damnedest is the trial of Fritz Kuhn."

Here is a dumb-bunny with the intellectual capacity of an underprivileged louse, with the moral sense of a rattlesnake in coil, who is being put to the trouble and expense of a lawsuit because a lot of other subidiots gave him their money to use as he pleased.

He spent it like the little tin dictator that he is of 20,000 or 30,000 superchumps that they are. He got him a cutie, or possibly he didn't. Maybe he was just playing "drop the handkerchief" or "postoffice" to fool his wife.

But it is all being dragged through the press of the country as though it was really sumpin'!

Destruction Of Czecho-Slovakia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent summary execution of Czech students in Prague, the imprisonment of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of others, and the closing of colleges and universities "for a period of three years," have so shocked the civilized world that even the German authorities have felt it necessary to jusify their acts. And their excuse was that "Germany is in a state of war!"

Unfortunately for this argument, the German authorities have no legal or moral rights in Czech territory. Furthermore, they have been exceptionally harsh with the Czech population from the beginning of their occupation of the latter's country. Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo, declared as early as last summer that he would order the shooting of ten thousand, a hundred thousand, or even the entire population, if necessary, to break their resistance.

The wholesale imprisonment of Czechs, whose only offense was that they were outstanding citizens, capable of leadership, was started immediately after the German invasion, and has been carried on more or less actively ever since. The outbreak of war was the signal for another great wave of arrests. Hundreds of thousands of other Czechs have been lured or forced into labor camps all over Germany, ostensibly to give them "employment," but actually serving to disperse the Czech population.

Czech industrial and commercial enterprises and real estate have been systematically maneuvered into German hands. Czech laborers and property owners have been displaced by Germans. The land has been stripped of its wealth, and the Czech population is facing hunger and undernourishment while huge quantities of their food products are being shipped into Germany.

Thousands of Czech schools have been closed, and Czech children are being forced by various means into German schools. Czech libraries and school textbooks have been purged of everything which might foster Czech nationalism. All newspapers, broadcasting stations, theaters, etc., are under German supervision to eliminate every Czech influence.

These are only some of the measures being taken against the Czechs, all with unnecessary harshness. And all point to but one purpose—the destruction of the Czech nation. Against this background the meaning of the recent measures against the students and universities of Prague is clear.

Mr. Dies' Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does Mr. Martin Dies, of Texas, who spoke in Madison Square Garden on "The Insidious Wiles of Foreign Influence," realize that the chairman of the meeting, Mr. Merwin K. Hart, has been a conspicuous exponent of such foreign points of view as that of Gen. Franco's Fascism?

Mr. Hart wrote scornfully a few months ago that the Spanish republican parties "had been hypnotized by the ideas of the French and American revolutions." Since when have the principles of the American Revolution become un-American?

Mr. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council, further showed his political bias in a news letter issued by the council, April 3, 1939, which declared that "New Dealism is nothing but the American form of communism." When Mr. Dies appears under such auspices, he gives us cause to wonder where his own loyalties lie.

Pronouncing 'Government'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of your correspondents in Sunday's Post, drawing attention to a general mispronunciation of the word "government" by famous legislators speaking on the radio, deplores the fact that President Roosevelt is one of the offenders, pronouncing the word as if spelled "gov-munt" or "gov-a-munt."

I have a complete recording of President Roosevelt's delivery of his second inaugural address at the Capitol on January 20, 1937. The word "government" appears in this speech 16 times by actual count.

I have just finished playing this recording solely for the purpose of checking on the President's pronunciation of this one word. The President's pronunciation of "government" was clear, distinct and correct.

Mrs. Washburn is correct in demanding that this important word receive the respect of proper pronunciation. She is evidently incorrect in attributing a slurring pronunciation of the word to President Roosevelt.

Communists' Position

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems that hue and cry has been set up against the Communists and their organizations. They are being accused by the press universally as agents of the Soviet Union. Nowhere have I seen a line or word in our papers which stated their position.

The truth of the matter is that the Communists are people who have lost all confidence in this poverty and war breeding system and are organizing to help build a society based on cooperation, not greed and profit.

If, they claim, the people, not the corporations, owned the farms, the factories and the utilities, the foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and human way of life would be laid. And if they point to the Soviet Union as a practical demonstration of their views, they have reason to say that we here in the U. S. A. can learn much from her example.

This system of government ownership of the resources of the country has lifted Russia from a land of backward, ignorant peasant to the foremost industrial and literate nation in Europe in the incredible space of 20 years.

To label a Communist a foreign agent because he supports the only socialist country is representative of the same kind of thought that hounded the genius Voltaire when he attacked the decadent French feudal monarchy and advocated its replacement by the more advanced English democratic government. The right to improve or change our form of government to meet the needs of different times is too precious to surrender it to unscrupulous politicians.

Shall And Will

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read in The Post of December 4 the exchange of letters between Mr. Friendly and Secretary Ickes. Mr. Friendly seems to think that Mr. Ickes has been inaccurate in his use of a familiar Latin quotation.

I am less interested in the correctness or incorrectness of Mr. Ickes' Latin than I am in this sentence from the last paragraph of his letter: "I will never be able to hold up my head again among my fellow lawyers." What about the use of this word "will?"

Allow me to say that I feel no more interest in Mr. Ickes' English than I do in his Latin, but I am keenly interested in what has seemed to me to be a growing disregard of the time honored distinction between shall and will by speakers and writers who must know the correct use of these auxiliaries. Is the distinction being deliberately disregarded because the reason for any distinction at all is ceasing to be thought worth while?

A short while ago I heard a well-known newspaper correspondent in a public address several times repeat the question: "Will we be drawn into this war?" By way of further explanation of my purpose in this inquiry, I venture to add that Mr. Sullivan, shrewd, penetrating observer as he is, seems indifferent to any distinction between shall and will.

And stranger still, President William Mather Lewis of Lafayette College, in his address to the students at the opening of the current session, made an obvious slip in the use of will for shall. Usage sanctioned by President Lewis should command universal respect.

If the distinction in the use of these two words is becoming obscure, why should the schools continue to teach and insist upon usages that were once correct but are no longer being observed?

For Registering A Protest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As in the case of the Nazi conquest of Czecho-Slovakia and the Nazi-Communist partition of Poland, the wanton Russian attack upon Finland greatly distresses the people of the United States. These events have an ominous meaning not only for the countries immediately concerned but for democratic neutrals and small nations everywhere.

The drive against Finland, cruel in itself, brings the menace of aggression and totalitarianism to the very front door of Scandinavia. It is only partly because I am of Swedish descent that that troubles me. In far greater part it disturbs me and countless other Americans because Scandinavia has for many generations stood for peace, economic sanity and political freedom.

In all three of the Scandinavian countries, and especially in Sweden, poverty has virtually been eliminated, unemployment scarcely exists, both farming and business have been put on an efficient and profitable basis. In these countries economic security has actually been attained by all groups and classes. And this they have done by wholly democratic methods.

Thus the Scandinavian countries are a source of both hope and inspiration to a world that is hungry for economic security as well as political freedom. They have shown that nations can successfully meet their economic problems without in any way limiting or impairing their political liberties. If now these democracies should be smothered under the heavy hand of Nazi or Communist totalitarianism, the loss to humanity would be great, perhaps irreparable.

One hesitates to suggest that the United States break off diplomatic relations with the aggressors. That is always a grave step and likely to have even graver consequences. Yet our protest against this aggression must be registered so clearly and effectively that Britain and Moscow cannot possibly misunderstand our attitude. And we must rely upon our representatives in Washington to do this for us.

Getting That Green Ticket

Well, I got it. I had been told it was an ordeal. It wasn't.

When the first automobile inspection law was passed, I began hearing about it. Everywhere I stopped for a pint of gas and free air, anywhere in the city or near the District where they have "D. C. prices" displayed, it was mentioned to me in hushed whispers.

The beginning of the enforcement of the thing was treated as if it were the crack of doom or the invasion of the Hitlerian hordes. It was to be "der tag," sure enough. It was not so much what they came right out and said, but the air with which they said it and how they shook their heads.

If you, being an ordinary motorist who doesn't really pay much attention to anything until it is upon him, would ask for some of the details, you would be greeted with a sigh and veiled looks of pity as if they wished there were some way they could break it without too much of a shock.

"But what will have to be done to the car?" you would ask of the garage interne who had inquired in a secretive voice what arrangement you were expecting to make to comply with the inspection law.

He would spread his hands in a sweeping gesture that meant, "And what won't you have to have done to it?"

Then he would hint at a few of the things: The lights—why that right one of yours was tilted toward the milky way like an archie antiaircraft gun searching for marauding zeps; the left one ran along the roadside ditches looking for gopher holes as you traveled—you could almost hear it baying on a hot scent.

And look at those dents in your fenders! Without a doubt, your brakes were cockeyed, the right hind one probably grabbed like a snapping turtle at the first approach of your foot toward the pedal, while the other took hold leisurely, so as to guarantee positively an uneven and dangerous stop—as sure of a skid when the road was wet as the sun is to rise the next clear morning.

He had noticed, too, as you drove in, that the front wheels were wobbly—no doubt every bit of the bushing was gone from both hubs. All such things—and he told you of those, with the inference that he had only mentioned a very few of the things that were pretty sure to be caught in order to keep your car off the street for a good while unless you attended to all of them in advance.

I believe one fellow over at a Virginia suburban garage and service station told me there were forty-some points they checked you on. If you got by at all it was a miracle, and unless you turned in your machine for a thorough overhauling—well, it was childish to think of such a possibility.

At first this repairman propaganda went big with me. I swallowed it all, hook, line and sinker, and the first joint of the pole. It interfered with my appetite and my sleep. I gave serious thought to taking the old piece of junk out to a lonely woodland spot and abandoning it entirely. The strain was getting me down. The last man who held my hand and spoke solemnly of the necessity for complying with this totalitarian tyranny nearly convinced me that I was in for a terrific, a cataclysmic experience unless I drove my wagon in and not only had them "jack up the windshield and build a new car under it," but that it was the windshield wiper I should have jacked up. A new windshield might be needed, also. And those fenders—he shook his head and shuddered slightly as he averted his eyes from the appalling sight. There were three healthy dimples in them.

Well, I found out all. Gradually I shook off the terror with which I had been propagandistically imbued and got down to cases. It was only badly cracked fenders with protruding edges that might catch and injure somebody, that were taboo. No matter if your outriggers looked as if they had been given a permanent wave, so long as they weren't jagged and threatening to passers-by.

The lights had to conform to a certain technical standard for the purpose of not blinding drivers of approaching cars when your high beam was on. The other requirements began to appear also in the cold light of reason so that, by the time I got my little postcard, I was taking nourishment regularly and getting a good many winks of sound sleep at night.

I did go so far, on the morning that I had been notified to appear, as to take my bus to a service station and have the lights tested and corrected to the Government standard. Yet I will admit that my trepidation stayed with me in part while waiting in line at the inspectory.

I drove in. A man told me to stop; to put on my foot brake. Then he stepped from behind the car where he had been looking to see if the stop light worked, and told me to get out. I did. He placed his gadget in front of each light, and drove the car on the brake-testing spot.

A wiggle of something in the floor and up went my front wheels. The inspector shook the wheel. Then they drove on and told me all was well. They handed me back my various cards—registration card, driving permit, etc., and pasted a green sticker inside the windshield.

I couldn't believe my eyes:

"You—you mean there's nothing at all wrong?"

"No," he laughed.

"Tough!" I said, and he laughed more.

He added: "I wish we could pass them all as easily as that and with as clean a bill of health."

The "ordeal" was over. Another lion in the way had rattled his chains. But I went home and wrote this HYMN OF VICTORY.

Fair Enough

Psychiana Disciples

DOC ROBINSON, of Moscow, Idaho, who says he talked with God and got rich in almost no time, is not perturbed by insinuations that he came by his title as working as clerk in a Moscow drug store. In such canards he replies that he got a D. D. from the College of Divine Metaphysics of Indianapolis and a Ph.D. from Voltaire University of Paris, France But that's nothing. The Doc's religious philosophy, known as Psychiana, on sale at $20 for the 11-month course, payable in easy installments, has a wider charter, so he says, than the University of Idaho. He says the university can't give Ph. D.'s, but that he can. If he wanted to he could append to his own name enough letters to spell antitotalitarianism. But he doesn't want to. Doc is title enough for him.

Nor is he envious of other current operators in the God business. His trade is growing, and the others merely amuse him, except when they crib his stuff. And, as he himself said in discussing a rival whom he regards as a rather harmless impostor, there is little that the authorities can do to interfere with the God business if a man is ordinarily prudent and knows the laws.

'Religious' Cults Enjoy Immunity

A NUMBER of smart individuals have canvassed the opportunities and the legal conditions and have discovered that almost any goblin cult called a religion may enjoy immunity from intrusion, molestation and most taxes. Otherwise you would have religious persecution in a free country, and public opinion would never stand for that.

The deadliest defect in religious promotions is sex. The Doc's own stuff, as he calls it, cannot be challenged on such grounds, because Psychiana does not counsel sex impurity—a wise provision. And, rather oddly, the more prominent competing spiritualisms of the present hour require the faithful to forego sex altogether. On the other hand, this trend is not as odd as it may seem. In other years ephemeral movements were led by lively roosters who were after the money, to be sure, but carried on sidelines which got them into trouble with the law.

Most Of The Joiners Past Middle Age

SO A WISE god-man of today, scanning the difficulties of those who went before, forfends interference by adjuring his followers to put such thoughts away. Moreover, young people are not likely to have money or to be desperate for faith and hope. So the joiners are mostly subdued persons beyond middle age, with some accumulation or inheritance of wealth, perhaps the insurance on a departed spouse, to toss upon the drum while in the throes. It works out very nicely.

As every businessman should, the Doc knows the laws pertaining to his line, and, again, as every alert businessman should, he keeps posted on the activities and the type of goods handled by other operators in the same field. Of Father Divine, the colored god-man, he spoke in a tone of professional admiration.

"That fellow," he said, "is the kingpin of them all. But I don't get his stuff. I just don't get it at all."

You will note that he spoke of the others as "them." He didn't say "us all." He doesn't regard himself as one of "them." He is the genuine god-man, the one who talked with God, "actually and literally," as his advertisements say, whereas of the others the best that can be said is that they are mistaken.

Delinquent Students Face Lawsuits

SOME OF THEM may sincerely believe that they have talked with God, that they are God's exclusive messengers, or, indeed, that they are God. But the joke is on them and their followers, and it would be worth something to see the look on the faces of the deluded when they wake up dead and discover that they went milling after false gods and donated their savings, jewelry and real estate as "love gifts" to impostors.

The Doc is jovial, but he is no victim of sentiment in dealing with disciples who are deadbeats or slow pay. He will not be gypped by gyps. Not the Doc.

Last February a delinquent Psychiana student got a letter from a collection agency in Wilmington, Del., which said:

"Dear Madam: The school has just reported your payment of $3.50, which reduces this balance to $5. We want that balance no later than March 4. Frankly, it is immaterial whether you settle with us or with the school's attorney, but a lawsuit will mean both unpleasantness and expense to you. For your own protection, therefore, have the balance here by the date mentioned."

That was telling her where to get off. And if the manner sounds uncharitable and not quite divine, after all, Psychiana is Doc Robinson's own god stuff. He got it up. It is his property, and he turns delinquents over to the agency in the routine course of business, as any sound businessman would.

The Isolationist's Dilemma

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL reaction of the people of the United States to the Russian invasion of Finland is a fact of first importance.

I think there is no question that the country is more perturbed and more outraged than it has been at any point thus far in the European war.

Perhaps it is because of the extremely friendly relations that this country has with Finland; our admiration for the way in which the Finns have conducted their social, economic and financial affairs; the esteem in which Finland and all the Scandinavian countries are held in this country.

Perhaps, also, it is because of the complete cynicism of the Russian argument—the guise of neutrality and the pose of peace.

Ruthless Invasion Is Eye-Opener to U. S.

AND PERHAPS it is because of the deep, subconscious fear of communism, which is very real. We see now how communism spreads itself by the sword. The issue between Finland and Russia is now no longer one of ports and bits of land; it is a fight for the control of Finland—to all purposes the annexation of Finland as part of the Soviet Union. The "peoples government" which the Russians have set up is a pretense. Its headquarters are supposed to be on a piece of the Karelian Isthmus that the Finns evacuated in order not to provoke Russia. Its real headquarters are in Moscow, and its officials are men who fled from Finland after the abortive attempt at a Communist revolution there in 1917-18. The new "Finnish peoples' government" is composed of members of the Comintern, and their capital is Moscow, not Terijoki.

All the attempts of the world Communist press to depict Finland as a Communist country at heart are lies. Finland is as anti-Communist as any country in the world, and for very good social reasons. It has little large-scale capitalism and a very small industrial proletariat. There have been no Insulls and Staviskys in Finland; there are restrictions upon speculation; there is a widespread distribution of private property; 87 per cent of the people live on the land; the state is completely solvent—the unbalancing of the budget is forbidden in the constitution—and Finland is a model for the world in the extent and management of cooperatives.

Its social legislation is advanced. It is a political democracy in which the strongest single party is the Social Democratic.

The standard of living for the common man is infinitely higher in Finland than it is in the Soviet Union.

Embargo Foes Now Seek Blow At Soviet

TO CROSS the border from the Soviet Union into Finland is to cross from a world of dirt, disorganization, food shortage and terror, into one of cleanliness, hygiene, modest and well-distributed plenty, order, law and freedom.

The Communist rising was suppressed and suppressed bloodily during the civil war.

But it was suppressed by the overwhelming majority of Finns, who saw in it, among other things, a new attempt to fasten Russian control upon Finland.

And still it is interesting to observe that the very people who fought to prevent our lifting the embargo on arms and who were fixed in their minds against any naming of an aggressor in this war now want us to name the aggressor and establish an embargo on arms to Russia while sending them to Finland and even extending credit to her.

The public reaction is a demonstration of how impossible it is to legislate a neutrality policy in advance of unforeseen events. If we are to embargo arms to aggressors, let us be consistent about it. Let us embargo them—immediately, and to all aggressors. If we are to defend our own interests and the interests of this hemisphere exclusively, then we should be very greatly concerned about the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands and immediately enter into the closest relations with Portugal and Spain, making it clear that we will tolerate no change in the status of these islands.

U. S. Should Make Its Position Clear

OR, IF WE are to cast the great political, economic and industrial power of this country against unprovoked aggression, then we should make it perfectly clear that we intend to do so and have no communication with bandits—in full realization of the possible, however remote, consequences of such a policy.

The Russians have exactly as good a case in Finland as the Germans had in Poland, Czecho-Slovakia or Austria—namely, the fact that at one time or another in history all these places were part of a Russian or a German empire, and that, for pretended reason of national security, that fact furnishes an excuse for gobbling them up, preferably by blackmail, and if necessary by unprovoked and undeclared war.

The Russians are simply demonstrating that a technique already applied by Japan in China, by Italy in Ethiopia, and by Germany in central Europe can be copied indefinitely whenever a strong power sees a favorable opportunity for attacking a small power.

United Front Needed To Battle Gangsterism

GANGSTERISM is contagious, in the absence of any united front to oppose it. It breaks out now in one spot and now in another. If this war goes on, we shall see terrific things—worse things than anything yet—before it is over. It is a very great question whether the United States can survive as a free people and become a more prosperous and better organized people in a world of illimitable terror which bit by bit extends to new places and to fresh continents, using propaganda, revolution, interference in the internal affairs of nations and war as weapons.

We have to adjust ourselves to new forms of war with new kinds of weapons, notable among them the political weapon use, not through diplomatic channels but directly upon the masses of the world—belligerents and neutrals alike. We have to adjust ourselves to new concepts of neutrality. Let us not forget that Russia, also, is "neutral."

The attack upon Finland has certainly opened the eyes of this country to the possible scope of the war. It has helped arouse us to the fact that we live in a hideously dangerous world in which there are going to be no free rides to freedom and security. But it is only another of the episodes, snowballing their terror around the world, which the far-sighted could see when the first one was committed with impunity.

Fifteenth Street Building Brings $120,000 on Block

A large office building at 727 Fifteenth street northwest, former home of the bankrupt mortgage banking firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co., was sold at public auction yesterday for $120,000, to James O'Donnell, retired businessman, who acquired it as an investment. The sale, subject to court approval, was advertised by Henry P. Blair, Julius I. Peyser and Michael M. Doyle, trustees. Vernon G. Owen was the auctioneer.

The building, although only one story in height, is of monumental stone and marble construction with foundations capable of supporting a number of additional stories. Present quarters of the Washington office of Laidlaw & Co., New York Stock Exchange firm, the building was erected in 1907 for the Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co. Norcross Bros. Co. was the builder and Paul J. Pelz, the architect.

8 Tile Concerns, 2 Unions Indicted In Trust Drive

Detroit, Dec. 5 (AP).—A special Federal grand jury today indicted 35 individuals, 8 manufacturing concerns, 3 contractors' associations, 2 A. F. of L. union locals and jobbers, charging that a monopoly had been created in the tile trade in the Detroit area.

The indictment was brought under the antitrust laws. Federal officials said it was the first time a criminal indictment ever was returned against all branches of an industry.

The indictment charged that a conspiracy existed to drive out of business 60 independent tile contractors, by shutting off their tile and labor supply.

Detroit Tile Contractors Association, the Greater Detroit Tile Contractors Association and the Tile Contractors Association of America, three of the defendants, were named as the only mediums through which contractors in this area could obtain tile.

Third Term Silence

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Plea Of Senator Norris

IN SENATOR NORRIS, the New Dealers have their most impressive spokesman for a plea to the President to maintain silence concerning his plans for 1940. He cannot be suspected of nurturing a selfish interest. He is respected, probably above any other living statesman, by the President, who, in 1932, spoke of him as "the perfect, gentle knight" of American progressivism.

Senator Norris is now reiterating in public only what he told the President to his face a few months ago. The President, pleading his desire to return to private life at the end of his second term, compared himself to a baseball pitcher who has pitched seven or eight successive games. He was not worn out, he admitted, but he needed a rest. Norris told him that despite his inclinations he might have to run again to hold together and keep in power the American liberal movement.

Members of the inner circle of the New Deal have been working hard to dissuade Roosevelt from making a statement which would remove him irrevocably from the third-term race or leave so small a loophole that a "draft movement" could not be easily mustered. They have expected the President will state his position in his Jackson Day speech. He will then be addressing the leaders and the rank and file of his party on the eve of the Presidential primary and convention season. As leader of his party, he can hardly avoid saying something about his own plans. The main concern of the New Dealers is that, whatever he says about his own desires to retire, he shall not close the doors against a "draft movement."

Party Strings Held As Long As Possible

THE PRESIDENT doubtless is willing to be discouraged from declaring his position too emphatically. For more than three years he has gone on the supposition that the threat, or possibility, of a third term would help him control the 1940 convention.

The President, however, has been subjected to increasing pressure from advisers who want him to remove himself irrevocably from the race. In justifying his failure to do so, the plea of Senator Norris will be helpful. Similar plans from other strong New Deal supporters may be expected during the next few weeks. Indeed, the President himself has recently told visitors reporting the existence of third-term sentiment here and there that it may be helpful for the present if such sentiment is permitted to simmer.

The President's suggestion that the national convention be delayed betrays a desire to hold the party strings in his own hands as long as possible. A late convention could hardly escape renominating Roosevelt or a Roosevelt-picked candidate. There would not be enough time to recognize the party under new leadership.

Friends Determined To Draft Roosevelt

MOST OF THE INNER circle of New Dealers, of course, have not seriously weakened in their determination to "draft" Roosevelt himself for a third term. Before the European war broke out many of them thought a European war in itself would create such a national crisis that Roosevelt could be drafted. Quickly it became clear, however, that their efforts—and the President's—to emphasize the magnitude of the crisis aroused fear, instead of confidence, in Roosevelt's objectives in the foreign field. When the Administration finally realized this it began to "play down" the war scare.

It is easy enough to keep out of war if you are determined not to go to war. A Vandenberg, a Taft, a Garner, or a Farley might keep us out of war just as easily as Mr. Roosevelt—probably more easily, since none of them seems inclined to take any risks on the far side of the Atlantic and Pacific. But to keep us out of war while satisfying our moral indignation and safeguarding our long-range national interests (insofar as they can be detected) is more difficult.

New Deal Destined To Remain Indefinitely

THE FINNISH problem is an excellent example. Probably nothing that has occurred abroad since the World War has so outraged American public opinion as the Russian invasion of Finland. Obviously we do not intend to go to war with Russia on account of Finland. But our moral indignation may be a first step toward eventual involvement in war with Russia. Meanwhile, the President and Secretary Hull are under pressure to give effect to our anger. How far should they go? Should they recall our Ambassador to Moscow? Should they break off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union? There is no clear answer. A step which may best vent our indignation may in the long run work against our national interest while doing nothing to deter Stalin.

Inner circle New Dealers, working for a third term, see four possible trends abroad which may intensify our feeling of crisis and the demand for a third term. First is the spread or intensification of the European war. Second is a flare-up in the Far East. Third is a chance to launch peace negotiations in Europe. Fourth is a chance to bring a peace settlement in the Far East. Either worse wars or prolonged peace negotiations will help them get a third term, they believe. What all this has to do with the New Deal, which is strictly a domestic program, is hard to fathom. From present appearances the New Deal is on ice already and destined to remain there indefinitely.

Brown Refuses Request to Picket Japan Embassy

Permission to picket the Japanese Embassy January 5 was denied the Sino-Korean Peoples League yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Kilsoo K. Haan, Washington representative of the league, asked permission to have "pickets with signs, flags, drums, firecrackers and horns."

Brown explained that picketing within 500 feet of any foreign embassy was prohibited by an act of Congress, and that having horns in a parade or the use of firecrackers were violations of police regulations.

Appeal To Geneva

By Barnet Nover

Finland And The League

FINLAND'S appeal to the League of Nations is a grim reminder of great expectations that ended in bitter disillusionment, of great opportunities that were stupidly frittered away.

It is not clear what the hard-pressed Helsinki government expects to accomplish by this move. The League is obviously in no position to do much directly for Finland. But had world statesmanship been equal to its responsibilities during these last 20 years and particularly during the last ten years the League could be in a position to do a great deal for Finland and for every other nation whose independence is now threatened with extinction.

But the statesmen bungled the job. Which is one of the principal reasons why the world finds itself in its present tragic plight.

IT IS PARADOXICAL that while the League itself is in a terribly weak state the League idea is as strong as ever.

Proof of this is to be found in the strangest places. For example, there is Mr. Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's journalistic mouthpiece on foreign affairs.

Mr. Gayda, like the Duce, has never been an enthusiast for the League. They disliked the status quo which the League was created to maintain except for changes that could be made peacefully. They disliked the theory embodied in the League Covenant and manifested in the organization of the Assembly that small nations are the equal of great powers.

So far as Europe is concerned, the Duce and Mr. Gayda have favored a four-power condominium of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany, with the little powers given only the right to obey orders. From the attack on Corfu in 1923 to the destruction of Albanian independence this year the Fascist government has operated on the theory that small nations have no rights which great powers need respect.

Soviet Russia is only the latest nation to put that brutal theory into effect.

PUBLIC OPINION in a dictatorship can be turned on and off like a tap. The fact that the Rome government has permitted free reign to pro-Finnish and anti-Russian sentiment shows that the Bolshevik assault on Finland is regarded by the Fascist government as inimical to Italian interests.

That is certainly the case. A Russian victory over Finland would sooner or later be followed by a Russian thrust in the direction of the Balkans, a region where Italy herself has a foothold and which she has long regarded as her particular sphere of interest.

Should Russia move to the southwest who would be there to oppose her? Certainly not Germany which might, indeed, join Moscow in the assault and robbery. Not the Allies, for they are otherwise engaged. The Balkan states are not yet sufficiently united to present a common front to the aggressors. Thus Italy may some day find herself bearing the brunt of the burden of resisting Russia in the Balkans, or of Russia and Germany combined.

NO WONDER, then, that Mr. Gayda looks longingly in the direction of Geneva.

"The Soviet invasion was unprovoked," he says. (Are you listening, Haile Selassie and King Zog?)

"According to the League covenants, Finland has the right to demand and expect League sanctions against Russia."

When the devil is sick . . .

But the Italian reaction is only one of a number of indications of the persistence of the League idea, of the constant if usually belated rediscovery of its usefulness.

After all, what are Great Britain and France engaged on today but a program of sanctions against Germany? On land and sea the war they are waging is primarily a defensive war. It is only in the economic realm that they have taken the offensive and it is through economic means that they hope, sooner or later, to destroy Germany's war-making power.

Except for the help given by the British dominions, they are attempting this task alone. In 1935, when, under Britain's equivocal direction, a broadly similar program of economic coercion was attempted against Italy, Great Britain and France had the overwhelming majority of League members cooperating with them. And it is obvious that if they could now receive the support then vouchsafed them the hope of a speedy Allied victory would be considerably brighter than it is.

THE SMALL nations were always among the most enthusiastic supporters of the League.

They realized that the League was a bulwark of their security. They were aware of the fact that there is strength in numbers. Now the League is weak and even the older system of the balance of power, which also provided them with a measure of protection, is inoperative because of the war.

The small nations can no longer, as they did before 1914 and again before the present conflict, look to one great power to save them from another. Germany, for instance, obviously could not prevent Russia from attacking Finland. It is doubtful if the Allies could give much assistance, at the present time, to Rumania. So one small nation after another faces the grim likelihood of having to defend itself against an overwhelmingly powerful neighbor that covets its territory.

It is perhaps the realization of this possibility which may mean the extension of the war far beyond its present limits that gives unexpected point to Finland's appeal to the League and the announcement by the British government that it will strongly support this appeal.

The League will probably be able to do very little directly for Finland and what it does may come too late to be of much help to the beleaguered Scandinavian democracy. But at Geneva the small powers of Europe that are individually threatened with aggression, and that means all of them, and the great powers that are fighting aggression may rediscover ways of acting together. The League may yet justify itself in the present world emergency if only as a catalytic agent.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

New York has barred cruising taxicabs from midtown. They must stand in hack lines, which is as it should be. There are more taxicabs loose on New York streets than there are people with money to ride in 'em. But the traffic congestion will never be helped much until some way is found to curb the freedom of the private car owner, who should come to work by train or subway, but who insists upon rolling into town in a seven-passenger limousine.

Bar to Debate Treaty to Lift Food Blockade

Exemption Proposed On Cargoes Destined For Civilian Use

Debate on the advisability of a treaty exempting from attack or blockade vessels laden with foodstuffs for civilian consumption is expected to develop at the next meeting of the section on international and comparative law, American Bar Association.

The session will be held at 8 p. m. Monday in the Mayflower Hotel.

The section's committee on military and naval law, in a report made public yesterday, opposed such a treaty while a second committee recommended the agreement.

Support for the treaty came from the committee on law protecting Americans and their property abroad and on the high seas.

The committee urges that ships loaded with food for civilian population in a devastated area in a belligerent country be furnished safe conduct similar to that given Red Cross vessels carrying medical supplies.

Food supplies imported into devastated areas, according to the proposed treaty, would be distributed by a commission representing neutral governments.

The committee on military and naval law declares that American proposal of such a treaty might be misconstrued as an unneutral act, "although prompted solely by the highest humanitarian motives."

Lieut. Col. Edward C. Betts, professor of law at West Point, will speak on "Military Aid to the Civil Power" at a meeting in the Mayflower Hotel at 8 p. m. Friday. The discussion is sponsored by the committees on military and naval law of the section on international and comparative law and the Federal Bar Association.

Panel members will be William R. Vallance, assistant legal adviser to the State Department; William N. Morell, member of the Board of Veterans' Appeals and president of the Federal Bar Association, and F. Regis Noel, former president of the District Bar Association. Col. Hugh C. Smith, retired, will preside.

A native of Gates City, Va., McConnell was a football star at the Naval Academy, graduating in 1907. Capt. Stapler was honored for displaying "qualities of sound judgment, initiative and tact of an exceptionally high order." U. S. Faces Shortage of Christmas Tree Ornaments From Warring Nations

By Alfred Friendly

It may be a white Christmas, but there is a possibility it won't be a green or red or gold or silver one so far as Christmas trees are concerned, it was learned from the Commerce Department yesterday.

Tree decorations, it said, never have been produced in commercial quantities in this country and for the first ten months of this year our imports were 36 per cent below those for the same period last year. In addition, about one-third of our imports of tree decorations arrives in November and December. Since the source is mainly Germany, and to a lesser extent, Poland and Danzig, there just were no shipments last month and there will be none in December.

"It is possible," the department cautiously admits, "that distributors who are not already well stocked may encounter shortages."

With foreign trade in such doldrums, the department is giving more attention to the domestic side of the picture. Today it will hold the first conference of a series with members of the Interdepartmental Committee on Interstate Trade Barriers.

Plans will be laid, it was indicated, for hearings on the subject before the Temporary National Economic Committee. A program will be formed and methods of joint work with the Governors' Conference and Council of State Governments will be discussed.

How to fire a man in the meanest possible way, as demonstrated last week by the Civil Aeronautics Authority:

Mr. X, who is to be fired, is a division chief, the recipient of frequent interoffice memoranda, which he initials and passes on to the next official. He was informed of his discharge in one such note, laid on his desk for his signature. It read, "Matters which were formerly referred to Mr. X will, in the future, be referred to Mr. Y."

Department of Useless Information: There are enough bricks in each of the six columns supporting the roof of the General Accounting Office to build three four-room houses.

The Federal Playhouse will present the second edition of "The All Kiddies Christmas Show," in the Agriculture Auditorium December 28 . . . John M. Carmody, Federal works administrator, will speak at a dinner meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration at Child's Gingham Club at 6 p. m. Friday. The meeting will adjourn in time for guests to attend the showing of films on "Scientific Management," at 8:30 at the National Archives . . . Germans Buck Tricky Danube For Supplies

Traction in Winter Is Difficult; So Is Neutrals' Reluctance

By A. R. Parker
Copyright by New York Times.

Belgrade, Dec. 5.—Convoys of barges passing Belgrade toward Germany on the Danube are understood to be the first to take advantage of the new through passage from South Russia to Germany's inland ports, arranged at the recent conference in Vienna between German, Slovak and Bulgarian navigation companies.

Though in a few weeks' time lowlying fogs will make Danube navigation difficult, reports that winter navigation on this river is impossible are exaggerated. In peacetime, indeed, the Danube traffic is practically suspended for four months of the year, but the outbreak of the war has radically changed the river's economic function.

Below Vienna the Danube current runs swiftly down onto the Hungarian plains and at the iron gate it passes through a gorge and tumbles across rapids in the Moldavian plains of Rumania.

Few Peace-Time Cargoes

In peace-time few cargoes are carried against this stream. The bulk of Rumanian oil supplies to Germany were carried from the oil port of Giurgiu downstream and via the Black Sea and Mediterranean to North German ports. Even Yugoslavia's oil came by the sea route.

Today Germany is pressing into service all the craft she can obtain to bring Rumanian oil, wheat, soy beans and Bulgaria's industrial crops, like nuts and meat, to Germany against the stream.

She has at her disposal some 370 tons of shipping tugs, lighters and barges, and she is reported to be transferring by rail parts of heavy barges from her Rhine fleet to Regensburg, where they are being reassembled.

Germans Find Problems

With the exception of the British and French fleets—some 12 per cent of total Danube tonnage—practically all neutral shipping is at Germany's disposal. But in reorganizing Danube traffic she has set herself an immense problem.

Without exception neutral Danubian states have refused to allow their barges to enter German waters above Bratislava unless there is an equal tonnage in their home waters. At the beginning of the war there were some 170 Yugoslav barges in Germany and it was only after prolonged negotiations that Germany agreed to the present barter system.

Traction presents another problem for powerful tugs are needed against the Danube stream. It is reported that obsolete craft are being resurrected for this purpose. There are signs that Germany has not yet mastered the problem of timing voyages of up-stream Danube transports, and large numbers of craft are lying useless at some ports, while elsewhere there is a grave shortage.

Nazis Overhauling

There are signs that Germany is now overhauling in the light of experience. Her experts are trying to break down neutral resistance to entering German waters, her diplomats are understood to be trying to find out what the neutral reaction would be to her arming her Danube vessels and efforts are being made to persuade the Rumanians to enlarge their loading facilities at Giurgiu.

Work is being pushed forward at Novi Sad in Yugoslavia to complete a shipbuilding yard for which the Skoda firm received a contract last summer, and Germany is also anxious to secure the right to navigate Yugoslavia's internal rivers, thus reducing the transfer of goods.

Experts, however, calculate that with the maximum of efficiency and with the help of all neutral craft available Germany could only transport one-half of her pre-war purchases from Rumania to Germany by the Danube. It may be expected, therefore, that a large portion of the goods ordered from Russia will be transferred by rail in Rumania and brought through Russian Poland, according to the agreement reported here today from Cernauti by which rail traffic will pass from Rumania to Germany at a low price.

Pope to Broadcast 'Urbi et Orbi' To World Friday

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Dec. 5.—The benediction "urbi et orbi," which the Pope will impart on the loggia of St. Mary Major Friday, will be broadcast to the world over a radio network, it was announced today. A recent decree of the sacred apostolic penitentiaria established that listerners everywhere might enjoy the same privileges of plenary indulgence that obtain for those present in the square before the cathedral.

The benediction will be imparted between noon and 12:30 p. m., Rome time (6 to 6:30 a. m. in New York), and will be broadcast through the Vatican radio station on a 19.84-meter band.

There are persistent reports in Ro that at the consistory of December 11 the Pope will name Luigi Cardinal Maglione as chamberlain of the church.

Missions Favor Hoover as Envoy

Detroit, Dec. 5 (AP).—The foreign missions board of the old Methodist Episcopal Church adopted unanimously today a resolution urging President Roosevelt to appoint Herbert Hoover as his personal ambassador of peace in Europe.

The board is holding its twenty-first annual meeting before absorption by the missions board of the new Methodist Church.

The resolution said that "everyone knows that Mr. Hoover's Quaker affiliations and experiences in the administration of European war relief eminently qualify him for this mission."

The resolution suggested appointment of a special peace commission with Hoover as the President's personal spokesman.

U. S. Sees War Prisoners Are Treated Right

Embassy in Berlin Conducts Relations For Britain, France

By the Associated Press

Prisoners taken in the conflict between Germany and the Allies are getting a better deal than those captured during the World War.

The American embassy in Berlin now is conducting diplomatic relations with Germany on behalf of Great Britain and France. One of its chief duties is to see that British and French prisoners are well treated.

In Washington, problems arising from American diplomatic representation for the Allies are being handled by Hugh Wilson, who resigned recently as Ambassador to Germany.

Pledged to Keep Rules

Officials said yesterday that Wilson had received no major complaints regarding Germany's treatment of prisoners, and that they knew of no representations from Germany as to the Allies' handling of captured soldiers.

Under a Geneva treaty of 1929, Great Britain, France, Germany and other nations pledged themselves to observe definite rules regarding the conduct of prison camps. Among other things, the "protecting power"—the nation taking over diplomatic representation for a belligerent—has the right to examine prison camps at any time and to interview the prisoners.

The latter can make complaints to the investigators. They are entitled to food equal to that given troops in base ships, must be clothed by the nation which has captured them, must not be marched more than 13 miles a day and must not be exposed to danger needlessly.

State Department reports indicate that all the belligerents have observed these requirements and that conditions are much better than they were during the World War, when prisoners often suffered from a lack of food and clothing.

Russia Never Signed

Problems regarding the handling of prisoners have not yet arisen in the Finnish-Soviet conflict. Finland is a signatory to the 1929 Geneva treaty, but Russia is not.

Besides taking a hand in the problem of prisoners, the American Embassy in Berlin is seeking to protect British and French property rights. It has taken charge of the British and French embassies, and keeps a check on Allied properties taken over by the Germans for war purposes.

Thus far Germany has ordered no general internment of British and French citizens, and those at liberty frequently ask American aid in facilitating travel and adjusting other problems with the Nazi government.

Germany did not call on the United States to represent her in London and Paris, but arranged for Swiss representation to Great Britain and Swedish representation to France.

U.S. Queries British On Ship Search

The State Department has advised Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, it had asked British authorities whether they had ordered any American vessels into belligerent ports in connection with their search for contraband.

Tobey proposed to officials of the State Department that word should be sent to England asking if such action had been taken which would result in forcing American ships to violate the United States neutrality laws.

The Senator referred to reports from abroad that American merchant ships were being taken to British ports for examination where, he said, they would be exposed to bombing and attack by enemy craft.

U. S. Dollars Requisitioned For Conflict

Total of 5 Billion Invested Abroad, Government Says

By the Associated Press

American dollars are being marched off to war, side by side with the franc, the pound and the mark. Whether they like it or not, United States citizens are contributing millions to the cost of Europe's conflict.

Nearly $3,000,000,000 in American money, the Commerce Department said yesterday, is invested directly in industrial plants and other commercial establishments in Germany, France and the British empire. And American money, like the rest, has been drafted for war service.

For years, it has been impossible to take cash out of Nazi Germany. Now England, France and Canada, the department said, are applying exchange restrictions, requiring permits for the exportation of money.

Heavy Taxes Imposed

In brief, Americans are not likely to bring home whatever profits they may make out of their investments abroad, at least not for the present. Besides conserving all assets, domestic and foreign, the belligerents also are laying heavy taxes against war profits.

Notably in Germany, every industry has been geared to the military economy. The largest American investor in Germany (General Motors) owns the country's largest auto manufacturing firm, and it is reported to be making military machines for the German army. Canadian units of American aircraft companies are turning out battle planes for Britain.

The $3,000,000,000 figure represents only the direct investments of Americans in the belligerent countries. Commerce and Treasury Department figures also show holdings of more than $2,000,000,000 in bonds, other securities and short-term obligations.

The bulk of the $5,000,000,000 total is invested in Canada, of course. There Americans have $2,029,000,000 in direct investments, $1,693,000,000 in bonds, etc., and $57,000,000 in short-term credits.

Figures for other countries in millions of dollars: Germany, 228 direct, 364 indirect, 74 short-term; France, 146 direct, 14½ indirect, 8½ short-term; United Kingdom, 474 direct, 100 (estimated) indirect, 53 short-term; Australia and New Zealand, 111 direct, 97 indirect.

Nearly all American money in Germany was invested before the 1933 Nazification. Since then, one analyst said, direct investors of every foreign nation have been attempting to withdraw from Germany as rapidly as possible. Some earlier investors have increased the size of their establishments, however, by reinvesting profits which they could not bring home.

Moratorium Stopped Bonds

There have been no American investments in German bonds since 1931, when the moratorium was declared. Then a standstill agreement was made on short-term obligations, exchange control was instituted in 1933, and partial defalcation on foreign-held obligations followed in an effort to conserve cash for defense preparedness.

Still, the Treasury said, Americans hold $111,000,000 of German national government bonds, $74,000,000 of provincial and municipal securities, $92,000,000 of government-guaranteed corporation securities and $87,000,000 of private corporate issues.

Americans have made quite a few investments in England in recent years, though not many in France. Because of the tariffs levied after the 1932 Ottawa conference to give the dominions favored treatment, and because of the accompanying "buy British" campaign, American firms found it desirable to build plants in England.

Bridges Asks Neutrality Law Be Used on Soviet

"Russia's invasion of Finland is deplorable, brutal and without provocation," he told reporters. "Finland is a peaceful nation and is the only country in all Europe which pays its debts."

Canada Army To Use Blood In Concentrate

Essence to Serve For Injections in Cases of War Shock

By John MacCormac.
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 5.—The Canadian army, the first in military history to be so equipped, will be provided with supplies of blood in concentrated form for injections. It will also have "banks" of ordinary blood available at advanced dressing stations.

This is the outcome of a private meeting of medical scientists held in Montreal on Saturday.

Toronto research workers have developed a means of concentrating blood three or four times in a form that will keep indefinitely. It will have all the properties of whole blood except the red corpuscles. It is of no use in anemia but has been proved of vital value in shock cases, of which there are many on the battle front. It will be used where it is impossible to get whole blood.

Whole blood will be provided in the form of "blood banks." But blood will not keep longer than two weeks in this form so that it cannot be prepared further back than base hospitals.

The concentrated blood serum on the other hand can be prepared in Canada and shipped to France. So far medical students at Toronto University have provided supplies for test purposes, but a call to the public to donate blood for use by the army will now be made. All such donations will be voluntary and unpaid. They wil offer a unique opportunity for Canadians who cannot get to the front to shed their blood in defense of their country.

So that there will be no delay in arranging emergency transfusion the blood of every Canadian soldier is to be typed and the type stamped on his identification disk.

Soviet Invasion of Finland Seems Hardly a Blitzkrieg

Observers Detect Half-Heartedness About War in Delay of Transmission Of Information to Russian People

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Dec. 4.—Although there is now a considerable amount of war news, chiefly in the shape of pictures from the front, appearing in Russia, there is a general impression in diplomatic circles of a curious hesitancy or half-heartedness about the official Soviet attitude toward the war. If this impression is correct, it would correspond with all that is known about the preliminaries of the invasion of Finland.

Curiously unconvincing was the "incident" of the alleged shelling which was made the excuse for the threatening campaign against Finland that was followed by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff's speech breaking off relations, but which at the same time, definitely restricted the possibility of military operations to the "cutting short of any possible fresh efforts by the Finnish militarist."

There was nothing about the guaranteeing of the independence of Finland, whatever kind of a regime existed. Molotoff declared that the Soviet Union was in no way concerned whatever about the relations that Finland wished to maintain with other states.

Actions Vitiate Words

Yet all this was vitiated by the sudden invasion of Finland eight hours later. Molotoff's words concerning nonintervention, Russian disinterestedness in whatever relations Finland might maintain with other states and guarantee of its full independence, were made valueless by the subsequent establishment, under the wing of the Red army of the government—without a country, capital or population—of Otto Kuusinen, by the conclusion of a treaty, therewith not only completely subjecting Finland to the Soviet Union by a so-called mutual assistance pact, but also forbidding her to enter any other combination, hostile to the Soviet Union.

The question arises—how to harmonize what Molotoff said at midnight November 29, with what the Red army did at the dawn of November 30, with the "treaty" signed December 2.

People Told Late

Interesting in the same connection are, first, the long withholding from the Soviet people—16 hours—all knowledge of the fact they were at war and their comrades were being killed while invading Finland. Secondly, from the paucity of early war news published, it is apparent that efforts were being made to minimize the extent of the operations. Last by the rate of the Soviet advance, which certainly absolves Russia so far from any accusations of waging a blitzkrieg. Taken together, these facts might justify the assumption that there have been, perhaps, and may be still, divided counsels in high quarters.

It may well be true that aggressive Leningrad influences, which have been pushing Moscow hard, have been and are trying to persuade the Stalin political bureau generally to move more rapidly and to go further than it thought wise. Certainly the whole progress of the Finnish affair since Pravda's violent attack on Finnish Premier Aimo Cajander on November 26 shows no evidence of that caution which has previously characterized Stalin's handling of foreign affairs.

36 Destroyers' Defects to Cost U. S. $230,884

Lessons in Building Cut Cost of Ships Now in Construction

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

The Navy disclosed yesterday that 36 destroyers in all will be altered as the result of defects discovered in new vessels affecting their stability.

It was said, however, that the net cost of changes in design and construction in the ships will total about $230,884, considerably less than originally estimated, and that savings will be made as a result of alterations in a number of the ships on which construction is not far advanced.

At the time the defects were first disclosed in correspondence between Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison, only 12 destroyers were mentioned. The other 24, it was said yesterday, include vessels on which work is not far under way.

Costs to Vary

Estimates of remodeling the ships made public by the Navy set the cost of altering six destroyers already completed at $41,841 apiece. Altering six vessels nearly completed will cost $35,541 per ship, it was said. Eight ships which have been on the ways varying lengths of time will cost from $1,368 to $3,2g0 apiece to remodel.

Study of the design defects and means of correcting them, it was said, taught naval constructors lessons in shipbuilding which permit savings of $4,732 to $12,218 on each of the remaining ships. Alterations in the original plans will make possible slightly cheaper ships without affecting the military characteristics, officials declared.

Publication of the estimates removed any doubt that commercial shipyards might be held responsible for the defects.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, has proposed a Congressional investigation to fix the blame for the defects. Naval officials, however, contend that they are minor and have been greatly overemphasized. They object to the vessels being described as "top-heavy," stating that the ships merely lack a sufficient margin of stability safety when fuel and stores are partially depleted.

Broadside Not Lessened

The changes being made to assure sufficient stability do not mean lessening the number of guns carried or the number of torpedoes which can be fired on one side at a time, it was said.

Under the Navy estimates, the cost of remodeling 20 of the ships was set at $483,984, and the savings on the other 16 craft figured at $163,200. Changes in the first 12 ships, it was said, will make available usable material worth $89,900. The net cost of $230,884 for all, officials pointed out, averages $6,413 per vessel of one-seventh of 1 per cent of the total cost of the ship.

U. S. Weaknesses Found

Fort Lewis, Wash., Dec. 5 (AP).—Members of a Congressional delegation inspecting national defenses agreed today their month-long tour has disclosed two major weaknesses.

1—The Nation's war industries lie too close to the coasts.

2—Anti-aircraft units are not strong enough.

The delegation is composed of members of the House and Senate Military Affairs Committees.

Gifts to Provide Anesthetic for 2,000 Chinese

Enough anesthetic to insure painless surgical operations for more than 2,000 Chinese civilians will be purchased from donations by friends of the late Dr. James Wallace, president emeritus of Macalester College, St. Paul, whose family requested this form of remembrance instead of flowers at the funeral.

Benjamin B. Wallace, of 3112 South Dakota avenue northwest, a son of Dr. Wallace, said yesterday he was sure his father "would have approved." Dr. Wallace died August 25, in St. Paul.

The contributions were sent to the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China, in New York, where officials declared yesterday that "the uniquely thoughtful and humane gesture of the family of Dr. Wallace will bring new life and new hope to thousands of innocent war victims in China."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Fritz Kreisler in a violin recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Concerto in C major (Vivaldi), Concerto in D major (Chaikovski), Cavatina, Shepherd's Madrigal, Malaguena, Gypsy Caprice and Tambourin Chinois (Kreisler).

As many of Fritz Kreisler's local admirers as could crowd into Constitution Hall last evening made this violinist's annual recital a gala occasion, and welcomed him with a cordiality that left no doubt of their affectionate esteem. They even filled the stage in a serried semicircle that left barely room for him and his perpetual accompanist, Carl Lamson, to reach the piano, and they had the happy air of participating in a huge surprise party. Among them were enthusiasts of all degrees from eager young violin students to such staunch friends as Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who has known him since he was 18.

Not only was it a Kreisler reception but also a Kreisler program, for the recital began with his arrangement of Vivaldi's C major concerto, continued with his revision of the Chaikovski concerto, and closed with five of his own compositions. In the performance was manifest the musicianship, the skill, the warmth of interpretation and the magnetism of personality which have won him his secure place with great artists of our period.

Kreisler's arrangement of the first concerto may be called the tribute of one virtuoso to another, for Antonio Vivaldi, famed for his fiery red hair as well as for his versatility, was one of the greatest violinists of the early eighteenth century. More than that, he composed more than 100 concerti and sonatas for the instrument when not writing operas, choral works and concerti grossi for orchestra. The C major concerto played last evening is distinguished by the affecting Andante Doloroso which is set like a glowing gem between two sparkling diamantine allegros.

Detailed discussion of what Kreisler has done to the Chaikovski concerto is best left to violinists, who may argue over omissions, alterations and changes in the cadenza. He has expressly disclaimed any attempt to rewrite the work, and his revisions have all been made in the interest of compactness. As far as the average layman is concerned, the things he has left out will not be missed, for the integral essence of the music has not been disturbed.

From the group of his own pieces, Kreisler excluded all the best known save the "Tambourin Chinois," and played the less familiar "Cavatina," the delightful "Shepherd's Madrigal" with its pastoral flavor, the "Malaguena" and the "Gypsy Caprice."

Restaurateurs Hear 25 Ideas To Combat Soda Fountain Peril

With philosophic calm, approximately 400 managers of small restaurants yesterday heard speakers tell of threats to the café industry and one of its institutions—the hamburger—at the second session of the Southeastern Regional Restaurant Convention.

Speaking at a small operators' discussion meeting at the Mayflower, John Ebersole, of Ebersole's Restaurant, White Plains, N. Y., reeled off 25 "new ideas" to brace restaurants against the encroachment of the "luncheonette and soda fountain."

He then revealed a New York creation, the "eggburger," which, it seems, is rocketing to Nation-wide popularity.

The other 24 ideas included:

"Early bird luncheon" to be served at 11:30 a. m. at reduced prices to combat the soda fountain.

The exhibition of paintings and statuary in restaurants to create "atmosphere."

Canvassing of prospective customers in the locality of a restaurant by telephone calls and letters. They would be given information on menus, etc.

Special communication system between office and kitchen to keep the manager apprised of "what's going on out back" with a view to greater efficiency.

Miss Ann Hunn, proprietress of a thriving New York restaurant, stressed the value of attractive settings for the modern gourmet. "Make your place an interesting place to eat," she urged. This could be done, she said, by attractive window displays, and interior decorations appropriate to holidays and seasons.

Christmas Day is observed at her restaurant by the singing of Christmas carols by customers seated at candle-lit tables.

An A-1 standard of service efficiency was urged by Miss Ann Gleason, one-time waitress and now manager of a Westchester County (N.Y.) restaurant. At her cafe, waitresses are ranked "captains," "seniors" and "juniors," according to length of service and efficiency. "Menu drills" and "pep talks" are frequent, Miss Gleason said.

Then, too, inspections of waitresses to maintain standards of appearance are held daily, she said.

Another speaker launched into an address urging "specialization" as the key to success in restaurant business. He was interrupted by a blast from a loudspeaker which announced a demonstration of the ultimate in salad and desserts by a white-gowned woman chef.

The restaurateurs heard recipes for and saw examples of such creations as "upside down jello cake," "prune and apricot pie garnished with cocoanut," "butterscotch and vanilla pudding."

Court Refuses To Extradite Dies Witness

Papers Linking Him To Murder Called 'Slipshod, Frivolous'

William C. McCuistion, former National Maritime Union official, yesterday escaped extradition to Louisiana when Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of District Court, branded papers seeking his removal as "slipshod and frivolous."

New Orleans police say McCuistion, who testified voluntarily on Communist activities before the Dies Committee, is wanted in connection with a murder.

"I am not going to send this man back, but I think he probably should be sent back," Chief Justice Wheat asserted in rendering his decision.

Papers "Botched Up"

"Individual rights are too precious in this country to permit a decision to be made on papers as slipshod as these are."

He added the affidavit linking McCuistion with a murder was "frivolous."

Walter M. Shea, attorney for McCuistion, pointed out the affidavit lacked certification by Judge Frank T. Echezabel, of New Orleans Criminal Court, and Chief Justice Wheat remarked the papers generally "were pretty well botched up."

"Terribly, your honor," Shea agreed.

Chief Justice Wheat directed that McCuistion be released unless there were other charges against him.

Two New Orleans detectives were in the courtroom during the hearing. One of them, John J. Grosch, chief of New Orleans detectives, declared he still regarded McCuistion as "a fugitive," and immediately sought a new warrant for arrest.

Police Judge John P. McMahon refused to sign a new warrant, however, on the ground that no evidence justifying McCuistion's detention had been presented.

"I'll get him if he goes to China," Grosch asserted. "If this court won't give him to me, he'd better stay in the District of Columbia."

He'll Eat a Steak

Shea declared McCuistion was ready to stand trial in New Orleans, "if he can get a fair trial."

The former union official said he expected to remain in Washington and "would not try to dodge any warrants."

"I'm going to eat a good steak," he concluded.

$50 Needed for Grandmother and Boy While Awaiting Old-Age Pension Check

two years ago, he had his first attack of faintness and only the quickness of a fellow worker saved him from a long fall. At first he thought it was only a passing "faint feeling," but it happened again and again. He brooded over over it, but didn't tell his wife because he didn't want to worry her. This secret anxiety made him all the more nervous. And finally it happened—he fell. He escaped with a broken leg and a broken collar bone. But the doctor says he can never work at his trade again and will never be able to do more than occasional light work.

Mrs. B. decided the one thing she could do to earn money and at the same time care for her children was to run a rooming house. She has almost enough furniture to swing it. With a little more furniture and the first month's rent paid, this family would be on its way back to independence. Only $150 stands between them and the chance they desire.

Lone Woman Must Fight Way Back to Health

Family No 11

Miss W. has carried a load of family responsibility since her school days, but now the time has come when she must have help to keepafloat.

Her parents were killed in an automobile accident. When funeral expenses were paid, sh and her younger sister, Ruth, found there was nothing left. But Miss W. found a job to support them both and even managed to skimp along so Ruth could have an education. After years of her sacrifices, Ruth left school before graduation to marry. Miss W. hid her disappointment and helped the young couple to get a start until the husband got a job.

Now at 35, Miss W. felt that she could relax and enjoy her own life. But two months ago as a result of overwork and worry, her health gave out. The doctor told her she must leave her job and have "complete rest for three or four months."

Miss W. can pay $40 for one month at a rest home, but that is not enough. Her sister and brother-in-law cannot help, for he makes only $16.50 a week. She has no one else to whom she can turn. With two additional months paid up, she could probably make a good comeback. "She can return to her job as soon as she is physically fit. If she is helped now, she might get a real break later," the agency says. Without this help, her outlook is bleak.

For $80, health and a new start may be given to a young woman who has always struggled to help herself and will do so again, as soon as she can.

Case certified and help administered without cost by Catholic Charities.

Amount needed: $80.

These families stand in urgent need of a helping hand, at a time when suffering and despair hover over them. Their hopes for help and a new start depend on The Post's Christmas Fund for the Neediest Families. They cannot be helped by public relief funds because of limitations, including the fact that most of them are families with an "unemployed employable" member. The private agencies have more calls for help than they can meet on their limited budgets.

These families have been carefully investigated and selected by five family welfare agencies, members of the Council of Social Agencies. They are Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion Welfare Office, Salvation Army and Bureau of Rehabilitation.

Soviets Fail to Buy U. S. Planes

Nothing less than one of the Boeing "flying fortresses"—pride of the United States Army Air Force—was the first goal of a Soviet buying mission in its unexpected and unsuccessful tour of American plane factories last week.

The mission, informed circles here disclosed yesterday, appeared out of the blue at the Boeing plant in Seattle last Thursday night and asked to buy one of the big four-engined bombers which are recognized as the best in the world. They wanted immediate delivery and, it is understood, planned to fly it home.

Boeing officials, knowing that other foreign nations have unsuccessfully sought permission to buy "fortresses," turned them down, and immediately notified Washington. It was the first any American officials or aircraft manufacturers knew there was a Russian mission here or that Moscow was seeking American warplanes.

The "moral embargo" on sale of warplanes to Russia was speedily applied. Before it could be announced the Soviet mission visited the Curtiss plant and wanted pursuit planes of the type the French have bought. Other factories were visited without success before the group gave up.

Whether the Russians wanted the big bomber to take apart and attempt to build prototypes or whether it was for use against Finland, is not known.

Officials are also wondering why they went directly to the plane factories without first visiting Washington as is the usual procedure. Planes cannot be exported without a license from the State Department and in case of types used by our armed services, without the permission of the Army and Navy as well.

Maids' Dresses Styled Like Street Frocks

New Uniforms Chic, Yet Moderate in Price; Novelties for Nurses

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

Marshall Adams

STATISTICAL fiends claim Washington has more "maids in uniform" per capita than any other city in the country, probably because of the great amount of private entertaining done here as against public cafe "societying in other cities. As a result, the selection of uniforms this season for maids, housekeepers, serving girls, dietitians and trained nurses is not only varied but from the stylistic viewpoint never more appealing.

With the holiday party season getting primed, alert hostesses are stocking up on extra uniforms, caps aprons and cover alls for their maids. A local store, famed for its smart selection of a nationally known brand of uniforms, reports women already are buying surplus uniforms by the threes and sixes.

Flattering Styles

If you haven't seen these new uniforms lately, you'll be surprised to find how really chic yet moderately priced they are this year. Many are styled as cleverly as street frocks with all sorts of innovations in line, cut and detailing. The loose "bag," resembling a sack of salt tied in the middle, in which your Lena or Mary once served dinner, is entirely a thing of the past. It has been replaced by the shirt maker style of uniform adaptable to every figure and type.

The newest serving uniforms are invisably zippered or buttoned, have smart pelated bosoms and raised boxy shoulder lines to insure beauty of silhouette for both stewardess or scullery maid. Some uniforms are longer waisted for difficult figures with becoming flared skirts, set-on belts and capacious pockets.

These little uniforms have fetching ways, too, for the watered moires, celanese taffetas, or crepes or jacquarded silk mohairs are flattering on answer-the-door maids at this festive dress-up season. These formal long-sleeved uniforms have either embroidered organdy or lace trimmed marquisette collars and cuffs and aprons and caps to match. The separate cap, apron, collar and cuff sets, incidentally, are so humble in price that they're lifesavers for penny-pinchers who can't afford entire new uniform sets.

Novelties For Nurses

However, the better quality uniforms are well worth their $3 or $4 cost when the distinctive wine, gray, green, navy and black colorings, and stylings are considered.

The broadcloth work-a-day uniforms, too, are young and gay-looking in their new pin-checks, scalloped collars and cuffs, shirtmaker yokes and detachable buttons. If a new maid is being broken in for holiday service, four or five of these washable cottons are recommended by domestic help experts along with two or three of the formal silk ones.

Nurses and dietitians, too, usually need a change of uniform about this time of year. They get plenty of it with the novel plastron-front bodices, pleated and pin-tucked bib fronts and even sunburst-pleated bustline detailing.

The old-time regulation club collar for nurses has also given way to upright tab collars ending in clever cartridge-pleated epaulettes and the girls in white now have the sanction of almost every hospital in Washington for wearing softly flared skirts rather than their former "wooden" ones

'Maedchen in Uniform'

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

New Exercise Records Are Graded According To Reducer's Capacity; Provide 15-Minute Workout for Busy Housewives

NO DOUBT about it . . . there are some women who need someone standing over them to make them exercise! Slimming, they think, would be a cinch if they could only enroll for a course at a salon and have an instructor put them through those intricate kicks and stretches one word at a time.

But the average housewife can't very well leave the dishes in the sink while she hastens out to keep a rendezvous with exercise! And so Wanda Bowman-Wilson, a Manhattan authority on scientific slimming, has come forth with a set of phonograph records which bring expert instruction right into your living room.

You can certainly play hooky from housework for 15 minutes in the midmorning while you go about the business of acquiring a figure your husband will admire as extravagantly as he does your apple pie! And if you will take that much time out every morning, it is guaranteed that within a few weeks you can do such a thorough job of remaking your figure that you will look years younger.

Exercises Graded

One good thing about these recorded exercises is that they are graded according to your capacity for exercise. You start with very mild, simple movements, and gradually work up to strenuous calisthenics. And that is a rule any beginner should follow! It will make you supple instead of stiff and discouraged.

Some of the instructions are familiar to you—I hope! But they are well worth repeating . . . You can exercise at any time during the day except before breakfast, but you should wait at least an hour after meals. You should exercise in a room temperature of 70 to 75 degrees, since the muscles work more efficiently in this temperature. It is best to exercise in your bare feet or in anklets—this helps to strengthen the feet—and to wear a play suit or bathing suit for freedom of movement.

You can exercise every day—if you're serious! But exercise three times a week will get results. Miss Wilson warns that the exercises should not be taken more than once a day.

Diet Needed, Too

These exercises are not only safe for the average woman to follow, but they are accurate and will get results in an amazingly brief period of time. Since streamlining has become the great feminine preoccupation, women are devoting considerable time and talent to the pursuit of slenderness—you might as well get results for your efforts.

If you are overweight, however, you must not expect exercise to take the place of diet. Exercise is slimming, but it takes a careful calorie count to slough off the pounds.

A Woman's New York

New York, Dec. 5.

I DON'T suppose there is a more popular sport in America than going to the movies—provided, of course, that Mom can drag Pop out of his comfortable chair and the house after dinner. For it is a commonplace in the picture business that the girls keep the cameras turning and the actors eating occasionally—except in the case of a strictly "man's picture," of which a few are ground out.

Alice Hughes

Here in New York our moviegoing is largely a matter of choice. If we go suddenly insane to see a top-notcher, we go over to Broadway and fight our way, slowly, into one of the cathedrals. This my aged spouse, Brother Hall, absolutely refuses to do. A veteran of years of professional film criticism, with its easy access to press seats, he is spoiled rotten, and now, at his advanced age, he wouldn't stand in line 5 minutes to witness a dozen Gipsy Rose Lees in an inch of blue chiffon. This causes me much grief, for I don't mind.

So the conservative movie fan here follows carefully the progress of the saga she particularly wants to see. We watch it slowly progress downward to the second run, the third and finally to the fourth—when it appears at the dingy and odoriferous theater nearest us on Murray Hill. There we finally catch the movie we wanted to see three weeks before, at a third the cost and without the butting and faint fisticuffs which must be endured on Broadway when a hit is in the house.

That's the way most Gothamites take their movies, in the home neighborhood, with perhaps a set of China thrown in on Tuesday nights. It's our belief that the movies should be nearly as much fireside entertainment as the radio—but she! Don't let on to the big Broadway managers, in their tuxedos!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—With Melvyn Douglas around town, the success of "Ninotchka," like a luxurious opera cape upon his shoulders, my eyes and thoughts turn to his tall, beautiful wife who is with him on this trip. She was known on the stage as Helen Gahagan, and when she made her debut I, and hundreds of others, thought her the most promising young actress the American theater had seen in many years. Critics hollered hurray. She met and fell in love with Douglas when he was her leading man in Pelasco's production of "Tonight or Never." Then she turned to singing, then to wifehood, and is no more seen by the great public. She is beautiful, she is highly talented, and her seeming retirement was a great loss to us all.

HAIR-DO'S, just now? The word around town is to just take it easy. The ladies and gents who operate on the locks are not trying to peddle us anything fanciful at the moment, for a wonder. Several of them have told me that the womenfolks have now become so individual that they prefer their hair as they like it for their own faces and personalities.

Borax Bath Saves Curtains From Destructive Gases

Have you wondered what makes your curtains and draperies wear out so fast? It's not entirely the action of sunlight, though that is hard on window curtains.

Most of us have never considered the possibility that draperies are affected by absorption of gases from the air. Factory smoke and fumes, gases from industrial plants, even the summertime use of fuels can do harm. Sulphur fumes combine with moisture to make strong acids.

A simple way to protect your household textiles and to make them more fire-resisting, is to run curtains through the household washer, so that they are thoroughly clean and free of destructive acids. After the final rinse, dip the fabrics into a solution of seven ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid dissolved in two quarts of water. Let the curtains soak thoroughly. Remove the moisture and proceed to finish the curtains as usual.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should New England Spinster, 60, Defy Kin and Wed Widower of 57? They Call It 'Disgraceful'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a New England spinster, 60 years old, a temporary refugee from the wrath of my family, and noting your clear and penetrating analyses of other people's problems, I venture to submit mine to you. Perhaps a sketch of my background would help.

When I was 27, my fiance, whom I loved deeply, was murdered on the eve of our wedding. The resultant shock and grief were so great that it was years before I could take an interest in anything. But time heals, and I found peace in the rather monotonous life of a New England librarian, and fitting into the placid groove of everyday life.

I found, too, that I was busy taking up the slack in the lives of my relatives, doing the extra things to be done, and they came to turn to me for such services. It was, "Let Abbie take care of Uncle Peter; she hasn't anyone else to do for." And, "Abbie can help send John to college; she hasn't anyone dependent on her." So I made a home for Uncle Peter as long as he lived. I sent John to college. I stayed home to take care of the twins while sister attended a convention. I baked pies for the Ladies' Aid and so forth. And I loved doing it, though I often wished I had some one near to do for.

Then I met a man whom I had never known, although I had known his family well for years. He is a professor of botany in a neighboring city and came to the library where I work to do some research. As botany is my hobby, we were very congenial. We took long walks and gathered specimens which we analyzed later at my apartment over a cup of tea. Or we rode horseback and played golf, as I have always been the athletic type. We attended lectures, like the same music, the same authors and the same types of literature. In fact, the companionship was so soul-satisfying that we decided to make is permanent, and I promised to marry him.

But my family rose up in horror. You would have thought I contemplated robbing a bank. It was disgraceful, they said, "marrying at your age." People would laugh and they (the family) would be ashamed of me. And so on. When that didn't have any effect, my sister hinted darkly at other reasons. She said it would be impossible for a woman "of your age" to adjust herself to married life, mentally, spiritually and physically—particularly the latter. She clinched the argument by saying that she had had two husbands and five children and ought to know. (In my family, it is thought that a marriage certificate automatically endows a woman with superior knowledge along all lines!)

I finally told my family I was going to Washington to have the advantage of the Congressional Library for research work, took my portable typewriter and fled, in the hope that the calm and peaceful atmosphere of the Capital might enable me to see things clearly. It may be that I should stick to the old familiar groove of life, though I must admit that I long for a home and companionship with this man—even "at my age." He is kind and gentle, everything a man should be, and I have a deep affection for him.

I neglected to say that the professor is 57 years old, a widower for 15 years and has ample means for a comfortable way of living. He (or we, if we marry) will go to South America next season to study the flora of certain regions there. That's the problem. How does it look to you? ABBIE.

Ignore Family Objections And Marry the Man

DEAR ABBIE: The colossal stuffiness, stupidity and selfishness of your family's attitude toward your projected marriage are almost incredible, and your sister's "dark hints" concerning the unlikelihood of a happy physical adjustment are sheer impertinence and should be ignored as such. It appears to me that this man was heaven-sent to complete your life; that the genuine, deep-rooted mutual affection and community of interests which exist afford an ideal basis for "late" marriage; that mental and spiritual rapport have already been warmly established, and that suitable physical expression of your interdependent devotion should develop as a matter of course, therefore.

It need hardly be said that a man and woman who are marrying in their latter maturity will never place the same exaggerated emphasis upon the sexual side of marriage as might a couple half their age or less. And in this instance, moreover, if the man were inclined to be sexually demanding, surely he would have remarried years ago. To further minimize the supposed handicap of your 60 celibate years, as affecting physical harmony, there is the obvious fact of your "young" vitality, of mind and heart and body.

This is told in the robust nature and variety of your recreational activities, in the unconsciously humorous detachment with which you state the case, in your involuntary adventurousness in "beating it out of town" when family pressure threatened to obscure your perspective and in the 99.2 per cent pleasure you consistently found in serving your kinfolks' needs, even though upon his whispered that it would be still more fun to perform the same labors of love for one who was more significantly "near and dear." Yours is a very rich nature, with an infinite capacity for giving and receiving devotion in an intensely personal exchange, and, this being true, you would be foolish indeed to pass up this providential opportunity for belated fulfillment.

I daresay there are elements of unconscious envy, jealousy and perhaps other forms of self-seeking (expectations of financial inheritance for her children, for instance) at the bottom of your sister's "horrified" reactions. For all her two husbands and five children, her life may have been rather circumscribed and humdrum, and it may be quite a blow to her precariously maintained sense of sisterly superiority to see you—the family's perennial fifth wheel—about to emerge from the chimney corner and marry a scholarly gentleman who will take you traveling to foreign ports.

In any event, and whatever the alleged or actual reasons for the family's hysterical reactions, my urgent advice to you is to pay no attention to them and to marry the man as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made. Anyone who fails to encourage the union, who refuses to see it as potentially productive of the finest kind of companionship, is essentially an enemy of your happiness. He doesn't care how much or what you are denied, so long as your denial contributes to his own sense of selfish security. M. H.

King's Guard Influences Styles

Hollywood.—The King's guard has jumped on fashion's bandwagon. Its unique contributions are fur busbies and shakos.

The busby sports a brush straight up in front and with side drape of soft material ending in a tassel. A modified version, sans brush, has been done by Milo Anderson for Geraldine Fitzgerald, who becomes a star in "A Child Was Born." For a hunter green velvet suit, he designed one of black persian lamb with a drape of black chiffon.

The authentic shako, which would be top-heavy, is held with a chin strap. Sometimes the strap is pushed up to the forehead. You'll see Olivia de Havilland wearing this interpretation in mink with a shirred red taffeta chin strap. This chapeau complements a red dress and mink jacket.

Budget Your Needs Carefully

IT'S NOT MUCH fun buying Christmas gifts if that means letting regular bills go unpaid. And the worst of it is you're usually months getting out of the jam.

But there's a way out of such money worries. Budget! For when you budget you look ahead—and you plan for pleasures as well as for the necessities of life. Then no agonizing moments deciding between the gas bill and your club's gala dinner.

How does a budget work? You begin by entering every cent you spend for a month under definite classifications. If your monthly income is $120, your budget for a family of three should read something like this: Rent, $24; food, $36; household operating, $18; clothing, $13.20; advancement, $16.80; savings, $12.

Perhaps you find you spend too much for food, have too little for your advancement fund—which covers pleasures such as gifts and car, personal items like permanent waves and carfare.

Then you make little cuts here and there in your food bill, add the saving to advancement. For instance, you save by using fresh milk for drinking only, canned milk for cooking. For cakes and other dishes requiring eggs, use Grade B eggs instead of Grade A. And you may find dried fruits cheaper than fresh in winter.

In similar ways you manage other items—pinching a little here, enlarging a little there—until you have worked out a budget to fit your needs and desires.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly, your name, address and the name of booklet.

Cleveland Mayor Urges State Aid

said Bricker made.

LaGuardia, addressing a neighborhood health development committee, said "not so long ago I heard the Governor of a great State say that we should stop waste and extravagant use of public funds and Federal expenditures for social betterment."

"Now, in that great State of Ohio, people are starving for the lack of food," LaGuardia continued. "I call upon Gov. Bricker to take back those words and provide the necessary funds to take care of the people starving in Cleveland and elsewhere in his State."

At Massillon, Ohio, Bricker tonight denied ever making the statement attributed to him by LaGuardia.

"Ohio's record in social betterment compares with any State in the Union, including New York," said Bricker.

"Nobody is starving in the State of Ohio, and nobody will starve in the State of Ohio. . . . Mayor LaGuardia was not elected Governor of Ohio, and as I understand it he has plenty to do in New York."

Bricker reiterated a charge to the effect any acute relief problem in Ohio today is due to "political manipulation of WPA."

"WPA employment dropped from 74,000 the month before election to 30,000 in September this year," he said. "If 74,000 needed employment a year ago at election time they need it just as much today."

In Washington Harrington branded as "unwarranted, inaccurate and partisan" Bricker's original charge, made yesterday in almost identical words.

Harrington made public a letter replying to Bricker in which he said WPA had 50 per cent more money for relief in 1938 than it had now; that between 1938 and 1939 industrial improvement in the Cleveland area had justified WPA curtailment; and that current enrollment there approximates 31,000, compared with an authorized 37,000 which WPA "is prepared to employ just as soon as suitable projects and certified employable persons are available."

The State made public figures showing it bore 32 per cent of the relief load from July 1 to November 1 and 50 per cent of the November load. The Legislature last winter appropriated $10,000,000 for relief, to be matched by communities.

While 46,000 of Cleveland's needy continued on what Mayor Burton called a "two-thirds ration," and around 12,000 on no city rations at all, 2,000 Toledo families continued "without enough food to get by," said Clarence A. Benedict, relief director.

Renard Warns U. S. of Danger Of Price Rise

Government, Industry Urged to Co-operate in Buying Raw Materials

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A warning that the Government's "preparedness program" might have serious effects on prices was sounded before the Monopoly Committee yesterday.

While witnesses were agreed general and rapid price rises would be disastrous for the Nation, G. A. Renard, executive secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Purchasing Agents, cautioned the committee that the Government's policy of buying strategic materials for storage will "perhaps have bad after-effects."

"With Government and industry competing on bids for raw materials, we're going to get into an inflationary position" unless there is a closer working arrangement between the two, he predicted.

Increases Generally Avoided

Committee members, who have feared war-induced skyrocketing of prices, were told by Renard that "very desirable moderation" in prices has been shown.

Another witness, Russell Forbes, commissioner of purchases of the City of New York, agreed that tremendous price increases have thus far been avoided. He added that the letter from President Roosevelt to Senator O'Mahoney, chairman of of the committee, asking that attention be paid to price movements during the war period, had "tended to stop the runaway prices that were being quoted during the early part of September."

Rapidly increasing prices, said Forbes, "would inevitably lead to the curtailment of essential Government services, increased taxes or deficit financing." In the "present state of the Nation," he added, "all three of these alternatives should be forestalled."

Price increases in some imported products such as surgical instruments have led to substitution of American-made goods, Forbes declared.

Declaring that food prices have risen, Forbes asserted that "the war has given packers and producers an opportunity to bring their prices to a level at which they may operate and realize a legitimate profit."

Similarly, Renard testified that not all advances in price are evidences of profiteering. "Some materials," he said, "have been entirely too low in price—too low for the producer, labor or the public interest."

Echoing testimony previously given by Dr. Willard Thorp, of the Department of Commerce, Renard said extra plant capacity which has been idle for several years forms "a cushion which can, in many cases, absorb added costs without advancing prices."

Renard said "we must avoid a bottleneck created by the demand in a few industries for skilled mechanics" and must make certain that adequate supplies of tin, rubber, manganese and other materials are made available "at prices which do not act as a lever on our price levels." He added:

"One of the strongest forces that can be used to avoid inflation is well-informed opinion that results from the wide distribution of accurate information on supplies and prices."

Theodore M. Johnson, supervisor of purchases of New York University, asserted that in the event of an unusually rapid price increase, educational institutions would be "caught between reduced income and increased cost of operation."

Noise-Hating Couple Parties 'On the Town' at Cost of $65

presse for two . . . $5.00," and a bottle of clos de vouget burgundy he had recommended . . . $6.50.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis had omitted three of the items the magistrate prescribed—a good show, a late snack, and an hour or so in a night club—"and bring the bill to me."

They easily could have doubled the total outlay if they had gone for the show, the snack and the night club.

The couple who had appeared in Yorkville Court yesterday to charge the construction company with violating the antinoise ordinance looked fresh and serene when they reappeared to present their expense account, after 9 hours' sleep in a comfortable suite at the Waldorf.

"It was worth it, wasn't it?" inquired Curran. "To whom. I don't just know yet. How much did it cost?"

"$65.32," said Lewis, and spectators roared.

"The Tour D'Argent has the best pressed duck," mused Magistrate Curran. "How was the burgundy last night?" he asked Mr. and Mrs. Lewis.

"Perfect," they chorused.

"It was the best," said Magistrate Curran. "I am reminded of one of Horace's odes:

"What tongue hangs fire when quickened by the bow!
"What wretch so poor but wine expands his soul?"

He indicated that he hoped the Lewises and also the department of borough works had expanded their activities by the episode. "And now," he said, "we must get to the question of this lilliputian bill, this infinitesimal account.

"I was afraid for a while I would be the known benefactor, but an unknown benefactor is paying it."

Here's the dinner the noise-dodging Lewises ate last night:

Two dry Martinis, $1.
Two orders of Beluga (Finnish—not Russian) caviar, $7.
Two lobster Newburgh, $5.
One duck a la presse for two, $5.
Wild rice to go with the duck, 60 cents.
Two salads de saison, $1.50.
A bottle clos de vouget burgundy, $6.50.
Two beignet souffle with sauce Zabaillon, $2.
Two cups of coffee, $1.
Extra cocktails for visitors at the table, $2.50.
Total, $32.10.
Tax, 97 cents.
Tip, $6.93.
Total, $40.
Their hotel bill was approximately $25 additional.

Downs Couple Greets Friendly Host at Tea

Mrs. Werlich Is Hostess at Event That Draws Cave Dwellers in Droves; Honor Guests Just Back From Cuba

By Hope Ridings Miller

RECENTLY RETURNED from their wedding trip to Havana, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs had a chance to greet many of their friends yesterday afternoon at the tea given in their honor by Mrs. McCeney Werlich at her home on Sixteenth street.

The party was planned as a comparatively small affair. The hostess originally resolved to invite "not more than a hundred people—maybe not that many." Several times that number came . . . and lingered . . . for one of the most enjoyable get-togethers of the season.

One of a series Mrs. Werlich will give this winter, the event drew cave-dwellers in droves and had much to recommend it—including "the original Gibson Girl" (Mrs. Daniel W. Knowlton), taking her turn at the tea table. Old Washington knows, of course, that Mrs. Knowlton, the former Josephine Gibson, was a model for her famous brother, Charles Dana Gibson, and that her dainty features were portrayed in many of his sketches.

Informal from first to last, the party got under way at 5 p. m. and was still going strong a couple of hours later. Mrs. Werlich, who was becomingly gowned in a pencil blue frock trimmed with white ruching at the neckline, met her guests at the door of the drawing room and guided most of them on to the tea table. There was no receiving line. Mrs. Downs, smartly turned out in a black frock drawn with gold threads and worn with a perky matching turban, mingled in the crowd, and so did her husband. Mrs. Russell-Bennett, mother of the bride, was also a center of attention. Her ensemble featured a handsome black dress, set off with a double coral necklace and blending accessories.

Hostess' Brother Pours Punch

Presiding at the punch bowl during the first half of the event was the hostess' brother, Robert Hinckley. Mrs. L. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and Mrs. Knowlton were among those who alternated at the tea table. Around 6 o'clock, when the crowd was biggest, you could look in any direction and spot scores of residential celebrities. I am sure there were a number from the Diplomatic Corps, but I saw only a few—including the personable and popular Canadian Minister, Loring Christie; Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; Mme. Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister, and her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, who returned early yesterday afternoon from New York. She went there to bid bon voyage to her three cousins, George, Michael and Robert Skidelsky, who left early yesterday morning for England where, as volunteers they will join the British army.

Most fun I've had in ages was stopping briefly at the tea table and, for once, quietly listening to remarks guests made in passing. Nine out of ten said merely, "And how are you today?" The tenth asked, "Where on earth have you been lately?" and invariably added, "I haven't seen you in ages!"

"Isn't it a lovely party?" and "Why can't real Washingtonians get together like this more often?" were other questions posed fervently and frequently. I never realized before how much people talk at a party and how few listen—even for a moment. But so it goes, and it's all very pleasant. At least it was yesterday when "old Washington" virtually took over the spotlight.

Debs and Dowagers Seen in Throng

Mrs. Alexander Legare was glimpsed among the guests; also, her son, Wolcott Waggaman; the Misses Elizabeth and Mary Howry; Mrs. George Barnett, who adds a very special brand of gaiety to any gathering in which she happens to be; the Misses Mary and Josephine Patten; Edward van Devanter, Gen. and Mrs. Charles Drake, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Ralph Snowden Hill, and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who was completely surrounded from the moment she arrived.

Very popular guests were two debs of the season, Miss Patricia Hurley and Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, who later attended the Kreisler concert. Center of admiring eyes was fashionable Mrs. Francis Whitten, whose cocoa wool cape was trimmed with Persian lamb to match her turban and other accessories. Mrs. George Messersmith was seen threading her way through the crowd and being stopped every step by somebody who wanted to chat with her.

Senator Vandenberg Radio Technique Tremendously Improved, Broadcasters Say

NOW THAT the right "radio personality" has become more important than kissing babies in political campaigns, we can expect to be hearing a lot of speeches over the ether between now and the elections in 1940. So we were interested to hear the other day from several broadcasters that Senator Arthur Vandenberg's radio technique has improved tremendously in recent months. Seems he used to be inclined to utterances of the stump variety, but of late he's toned down a lot and is much more effective.

All studio officials are of the opinion that any candidate will have to go a long way, though, to measure up to President Roosevelt, who is considered far the best radio orator of any man in public life. While most sound exactly as though they were "making a speech," he has the knack of seeming to chat intimately with his audience.

There is never any chi-chi about Mrs. Roosevelt's radio talks. She usually arrives at the studio without so much as a secretary, let alone a Secret Service man, and chats in friendly fashion with studio attendants as she awaits her turn.

ONE OF THE N. B. C. officials tells an amusing story about Maury Maverick, who talked over the radio often when he was in Congress. One evening, scheduled to speak, he wandered in, dressed in old clothes and tieless, and walked past the receptionist without bothering to identify himself. The latter ran after him and said, with the dazzling smile of a receptionist, and with a wary glance at his clothes, "Can I help you?"

Mr. Maverick, realizing that she probably thought him a tramp, replied, "No thanks. I just had an afternoon off from bricklaying and thought I'd come in and see some of the electricians."

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson usually furnishes some excitement around the studios when he broadcasts. Once, when his secretary had been making signs to him during a speech to hurry it up, he said to her, after concluding just at the correct time, "There, by God, right on the nose." The general was unaware that his microphone was still turned on.

TAKING A THREE-weeks vacation from her job as co-manager of Thomas E. Dewey's campaign for the presidential nomination, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms will open her house at Charleston, S. C., over Christmas. Her youngest daughter, Ruth, will be with her there for the holidays.

Mrs. Simms was born a Republican, married a Republican, and has campaigned widely for friends in New Mexico, where she also has a home. She took an active part in London's campaign at one time. A good speaker, she is now in Minneapolis addressing several women's rallies in preparations for candidate Dewey's speech tonight, when he will make his first important public statement on national and international issues.

A former resident of the Capital for many years, Mrs. Simms has now put her handsome home in Georgetown on the market. At present it is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason.

DEB DOINGS: Patricia Hurley will attend the Richmond, Va., cotillion December 18 and will stay there with Dr. and Mrs. Beverley Tucker . . . Marilynn Himes returned last night from New York, where she attended the opening performance of the Ice Follies at Madison Square Garden with her brother, Canfield. They were guests of their cousin, Mrs. Morgan Wing, jr., who gave a dinner in the Sert Room of the Waldorf-Astoria before the show. Proceeds went to the Musicians' Emergency Fund, of which Mrs. Vincent Astor is acting president . . . Because they feel too depressed by the war, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser will not make their debuts here, after all. They were to have been presented by their cousin, Arthur Bradley Campbell. The Misses Meuser, who were nieces of the late Marchioness of Huntley, have lived most of the time in England but are now visiting in the Middle West.

OVERHEARD at a tea for Alexandria cave-dwellers the other day: "But after all he's a comparative newcomer—his family only came here shortly after the Civil War."

Mlle Resco, Mother Join Refugees Here

Daughter Known in Capital as Portrait Painter, Musician

Having gone through the horrors of the first World War, Mlle. Micheline Resco and her mother, Mme. L. Resco, fled from France at the beginning of the second war to take an apartment at the Shoreham for the winter, and join Europe's war refugees in the Capital.

In their haste Mlle. Resco, who is a portrait painter of note and a talented musician, left all her paintings and her violin in Paris.

Only a few postcards in the bottom of her trunk, bearing reproductions of her portraits of Marshal Foch, Gen. Pershing, King Alexander of Yugoslavia and King Feisel of Iraq are evidence of exhibitions in famous French and American galleries.

Music Is Only Hobby

Music is only a hobby with Mlle. Resco, who handles the violin or piano with equal skill, acquiring the latter talent from her gifted mother.

Mother and daughter resemble each other so much that one would recognize one of them if one knew the other, and mother and daughter once entertained their guests with music, together.

Frequent visits to America several years ago, when Mlle. Resco had a studio in New York, have given her an excellent command of English.

During her New York residence, Mlle. Resco was a frequent visitor to Washington, doing portraits of several statesmen. Thirteen years ago she came here to present her portrait of Gen. Pershing to the "Military Order of the World War." Also from the same collection are her pictures of Admiral Sims, Gen. Harries, and Gen. O'Ryan.

Pershing Canvas Wins Prize

The portrait of Gen. Pershing, winner of the Knights of Columbus prize, had hung in the Musee de L'Armee in Paris. Marshall Foch was in the exhibition of the Palais de la Legion d'Honneur.

Children hold a fascination for Mlle. Resco and among her paintings, which center on military and church dignitaries, are a number of pictures of children.

Appalled by the war, Mlle. Resco does not plan to paint a thing during her visit here, but some day she and her mother will sail again for France and she will pick up her paint brushes and her violin and take up where she left off.

Mrs. Dunbar Urges Help for Children

President of Women's Clubs Federation Addresses Takoma Park Group, Citing Necessity for Dealing With Problems

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

"We cannot afford, as clubwomen, to devote our time to self-culture while there is a single child in the community deprived of opportunity for education and an equal chance for success," Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs emphasized yesterday in an address before the Takoma Park Women's Club.

"The time is at hand," she asserted, "for clubwomen of the country to deal with real situations. We carry forward into 1940 many unsolved problems. In the solution of them rests the fate of our people and even of our Government.

"Attacks on the small democracies in foreign lands throws upon us a challenge to make our own more secure and to demonstrate our ability to meet the difficulties which confront us as a Nation."

Mrs. Dunbar discussed the advisability of closer relationship with the other countries of the Western Hemisphere and urged the women to study local, State, national and international problems, broadening constantly the horizon of their understanding.

She was introduced by Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, the program chairman, and spoke following a playlet given after the luncheon, which was attended by more than 200 members. The meeting, luncheon and program were in Town Hall.

The playlet, "What a Way to Spend Christmas Eve," was given by the Club Choral under the direction of its author, Mrs. Edmund Green. It was the story of two shut-ins visited by the choral group, which sang Christmas carols, bringing them such gay Christmas spirit that they hobbled along with the singers and joined in their caroling when they left.

The parts of the two women were taken by Mrs. David Gates and Mrs. J. Franklin Wisner. The solos were taken by Mrs. Thomas J. Shloie.

The choral group has approximately 20 members who rehearse weekly, to which the high standard of their work is attributed.

The accompanist is Mrs. Waldo Schmidt. Members who sang yesterday included Mrs. Irwin L. Clark, Mrs. G. C. Walker, Mrs. Russell Ridgeway, Mrs. Thomas J. Shloie, Mrs. Burk, the president, Mrs. Arthur Tabbut, Mrs. F. Arthur Oehm, Mrs. L. S. Conger, Mrs. James Burch, Mrs. A. G. Stone.

More than 200 club members and guests attended the Christmas luncheon which was in charge of Mrs C. L. Snyder, assisted by Mrs. Walter DeGroot as vice chairman.

The president, Mrs. Paul W. Burk, at the business meeting, appointed a committee to investigate going forward with plans for a new clubhouse. Mrs. Gilbert Sward was named chairman of the committee. Other members are Mrs. Walter P. Harmon, past president, Mrs. W. L. Holt and Mrs. George Robertson.

Postmaster Choice Row Stalemated

Politics Charge, 2 Years Old, May Go to President Or the Courts

Four Federal agencies have fought each other to an angry stalemate in a controversy over an allegedly political appointment to a civil service position, it was learned yesterday. Solution of the dispute, challenging the traditional Congressional "clearance" of Postoffice Department appointments, may necessitate Presidential or court action.

The fight, in which the Justice Department and the General Accounting Office are participating, has been two years a-brewing. Curiously, it involves one of the least important Federal positions—a $700-a-year postmastership in the hamlet of Nankin, Ohio.

Dossier 2 Inches Thick

The dossier on the case, however, is two inches thick and contains communications from Attorney General Murphy, Comptroller General Brown and the traditional green-ink signature of Postmaster General Farley to "Dear Harry" S. Mitchell, Civil Service Commission president.

It also includes a copy of a letter which the commission says was written by Representative Ashbrook (Democrat), of Oho, telling that he had Nankin's postmaster appointed because the candidate was politically active.

The postmaster is Owen S. Sharick, appointed March 26, 1938, in violation of Federal law and civil service rules, according to the commission. Citing Ashbrook's letter, the commission said yesterday that it would make a public issue of the matter so that the country may know, "if a clear case like this can't be made to stick," that the commission is powerless to enforce the merit system.

Farley Refuses to Act

The case has reached an impasse at the moment, with the commission demanding Sharick's removal, Postmaster General Farley refusing, Attorney General Murphy holding that the commission's case would probably not be upheld in a suit, and Comptroller General Brown promising to refuse his approval of Sharick's accounts.

The Sharick case is no different from hundreds of other Postoffice appointments it is charged, except that by chance the commission claims to have uncovered evidence to prove its accusation that postmasters are appointed in violation of the law.

Was Third in Exam

The commission makes its case on the fact that Sharick was the third highest eligible who passed an examination for postmaster at Nankin. His name, along with the top and second ranking candidate, was sent to the Postoffice in accordance with the usual civil service procedure, which allows the appointing officer his choice of one of the three highest candidates.

The Postoffice Department sent the names to Ashbrook, the Congressman for the district, also a usual procedure. Under the law, however, the Congressman is allowed to make no recommendation of a candidate "except as to character and residence." In indorsing Sharick, the Postoffice claims, Ashbrook did not exceed this limitation and the department did not receive or consider any political recommendation, forbidden by law.

Letter Is Quoted

The commission, however, said it had discovered a letter written by Ashbrook to a friend. It was quoted by the commission as follows:

"Personally, I have no particular choice. Unfortunately, however, I sent the eligible list just as soon as I received it to Harold Welsh, of Londonville, who is chairman of the Ashland County committee, and told him whoever the committee indorsed I would have appointed.

"Harold does not feel that it is important enough to call the committee together but says he has interviewed a number of the committeemen and they are all for Sharick. This is due, no doubt, to the fact that Sharick is active in political matters and served on the committee, while according to all reports, Funk (the highest ranking eligible) has never taken such an interest in politics and has not been active . . ."

Postmasters Pay Selves

Brown has told Farley that as the Comptroller General has no power to review the commission's findings he must disallow Sharick's accounts on the commission's request.

In Sharick's fourth-class postoffice, the postmaster pays himself out of his daily receipts and his salary cannot immediately be estopped by the General Accounting Office.

The commission reported that it had heard Sharick had continued to pay himself, and had advised his bonding concern not to give the G. A. O. money if such a demand were made.

It was hinted yesterday that the matter might be taken to the President for his decision.

Capital Jews Begin Celebration Of 'Feast of Lights' Tonight

Rabbi Harry Silverstone will lead members of the Tifereth Israel Congregation in observance of Feast of Chanukka—symbolizing the lights of loyalty to God and man

Candles to Flicker in Homes as Observance Of Chanukka Will Be Opened; Eight-Day Fete Marks Second-Century Miracle

Symbolizing the lights of loyalty to God and man, candles will flicker in Jewish homes tonight as the faithful begin the observance of the Feast of Chanukka.

On each of the eight successive nights of the celebration, also known as the "feast of lights," Jews will light an additional taper, serving to remind them of the rededication of the Temple at Jerusalem after a triumphant three-year struggle against Syrian oppression.

At that time, according to Rabbi Harry Silverstone, leader of the Tifereth Israel Congregation and author of a book on the significance of Jewish holidays, a small bottle of temple oil which generally lasted one day, burned for eight days, an event regarded by the Jews as miraculous. This was in 165 B. C.

For several years he pointed out, King Antiochus Epiphanes had demanded that the Jews give up their worship of God, but there arose among the Jewish people a man named Matthias Maccabee, and his son, Juda Maccabee. The latter led the movement to overthrow the king.

Chanukka, which opens the twenty-fifth day of Kislev, the ninth month of the Jewish calendar, will be observed with special rites at the Washington Hebrew Temple Friday night, and in orthodox synagogues Friday night and Saturday morning.

Principal orthodox services will be centered at Adas Israel, Tifereth Israel, B'nai Israel, Beth Sholom, Southeast Hebrew, Ohev Sholom and other synagogues.

Fete Saturday Will Open Sousa Bridge

First Part of Span, Named for Composer, Will Be Dedicated

Southeast citizens will join with District officials and various organizations at dedication ceremonies of the John Philip Sousa Bridge across the Anacostia River Saturday at 2:15 p. m. according to plans announced yesterday.

The U. S. Marine Band, once conducted by Sousa, a native of Southeast Washington, will play.

Speakers include Adelbert W. Lee, general chairman of the bridge dedication committee; William A. Maio, president of the Southeast Citizens Association, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, who will present the bridge to the Commissioners.

Col. David McCoach, jr., engineer commissioner for the District, will deliver the speech of acceptance. After a salute to Sousa by District Boy Scouts, with taps directed toward the music leader's grave in Congressional Cemetery, Orrin J. Davy, president of the Southeast Conference of Citizens Associations, and Arthur J. Shaffer, president of the Southeast Business Men's Association, will accept the bridge on behalf of the citizens and businessmen of the Southeast.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will make the principal address. The invocation and benediction will be by the Rev. Edward Gabler, pastor of Christ Episcopal Church.

Nancy Lee, 9-year-old daughter of the dedication committee chairman, will cut the ribbon which officially opens the first part of the structure. Led by the Marine Band, the group of officials and citizens will cross in a procession.

Morgan Talks To Citizens on Tax Theories

Says 'Conservatives' Favor Sales Levies; Resolutions Voted

Washington has long been a battleground for the "conservative" and "radical" theories of taxation, Jo V. Morgan, of the Board of Tax Appeals, declared last night at a meeting of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Tracing the history of District taxation, he said that "the difficulty of writing tax laws here is that the District is neither a city nor a State, but has many of the characteristics of each. By the very smallness of its size it takes a unique place in tax history."

The "conservative" element he termed those who favored a sales tax, while the "radical" element he called the groups favoring a progressive sales tax.

Resolutions adopted by the association included objection to the admission of associations to the federation which overlap boundaries of existing associations; an appeal for an impartial appraisal of real property; a request for an increase in the Fire Department's personnel; and a request to authorities that the nuisance of rodents be abated. The association went on record as approving the continuance of the Dies Committee, and recommending to the President that diplomatic relations with Russia be severed.

President to Attend Press Club Dinner

President Roosevelt will attend the annual dinner of the National Press Club at 7 p. m. tomorrow, it was announced last night.

The yearly affair usually is attended by most of the Cabinet members, who are the only guests invited. President Roosevelt, however, is a member of the club. Walter Karig, chairman of the entertainment committee, said that this year a number of New York entertainers have been invited to the affair, including Lew Lehr.

D. C. Leaders Laud Morris' Civic Work

Business and Official World Join Praise in Testimonial Lunch At Advertising Club

Edgar Morris, Washington civic leader and businessman, said yesterday that there had been three great events in his life:

"The first was when a certain young lady said yes. The second was when the doctor said it was a boy."

And the third, he explained, was the testimonial luncheon where he himself was speaking, after Government and District leaders had paid tribute to his 27-year role in the civic life of Washington.

The luncheon, arranged by the Advertising Club of Washington, was held in the Raleigh Hotel ballroom, and to the tribute of the speakers was added the applause of some 200 club members and their guests.

"Certain Lady" There

In the group were the "certain young lady," Mrs. Edgar Morris, the "boy," Edgar Morris, jr., and the latter's wife. For Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Morris, jr., there were corsages, presented after the testimonials by Alvin Q. Ehrlich, president of the Advertising Club.

Also there was Morris' roommate at Clemson College, Fay Allen des Portes, now American Minister to Guatemala.

Morris told the speakers they had "put him on the spot," and added that "what these men have said has repaid me a hundred fold for any contribution I might have made to Washington."

"My close association with the people of Washington has been a very happy experience," he said. "I feel that Washington is the greatest city in America and the greatest capital in the world." He added that if he had been writing to Santa Clause he couldn't have asked for a finer Christmas present than the testimonial luncheon.

Morris was praised by Commissioner McCoach as one of a small group of civic leaders responsible for giving Washington more civic interest than "any other city I have seen." McCoach said his own remarks were indorsed "200 per cent" by Commissioner Hazen, who was unable to attend the luncheon.

James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, said that Morris is "an honor man in the national Red Cross because he has, as chairman of the District Roll Call, led the great cities of America."

"When you lead 125,000 of us in this roll call, you are a recruiting officer of which civilization may well be proud," he told Morris.

Praised By Colliflower

James E. Colliflower, first vice president of the Board of Trade, explained that Morris had filled every office in the board, and praised his present work as chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee.

Robert Fleming, president of the Riggs Bank, said that Morris, "as a public servant, is always ready to step into the breach, and deliver effectively in the service of our citizens." The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, said that Morris "is the kind of man who incarnates the word character."

J. Monroe Johnson, assistant secretary of Commerce, like Morris, a native of South Carolina, praised the initiative of the Advertising Club in arranging the testimonal luncheon, pointing out that a score of others listed Morris as a member. They included the Board of Public Welfare, Kiwanis, Masons, Alfalfa Club, Inaugural committee, Cherry Blossom Festival committee, South Carolina Society, 13 Club, Washington Jury Commission and First Congregational Church.

Others who attended the luncheon were J. Austin Latimer, executive assistant to the Postmaster General; Harry Slattery, Rural Electrification administrator; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Washington Police; Joseph H. Himes, president of the Alfalfa Club; George B. Burrus, vice president of the Advertising Club; Gen. Albert L. Cox, National Guard commander; Louis D. Krakow, Advertising Club treasurer, and Representative Butler Hare, of South Carolina.

125 Members and Alumni of McKinley Boys' Glee Club Sing for Dinner at Celebration

There's a popular song called "Sing for Your Breakfast," but these members of McKinley "Tech" High School's Glee Club sang "Home on the Range" at their banquet last night. The songsters are under the direction of Mrs. B. B. Thompson

More than 125 members and alumni of the McKinley High School boys' glee club sang for their dinner last night.

Crowded into the teachers' lunchroom at the school, the boys hardly got through the meat course at their annual banquet before breaking into song. A wide variety of melodies, from "Home on the Range" to "God Bless America," flooded the room spontaneously, one after the other, groups all over the room starting new songs as each tune ended.

Principal speaker was Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal of Western High School, who refused to do more than tell a few funny stories, because he wanted "to hear the singing." Frank C. Daniel, principal of McKinley High, thanked the alumni for their loyalty, and Assistant Principal Andrew Vliet told the present club he knew they would "uphold the traditions of the organization."

Four glee club alumni, who are also alumni of Wilson College—Roger Erwin, Howard Cranford, Claude Willis and Louis Waple—gave a selection of songs.

Lord Fairfax Leaves Estate To Robertses

Son, 16, to Inherit Property on Death Of Landover Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Roberts, of Landover, Md., are given a life interest in the 1,000-acre Prince Georges County estate of the late Lord Albert Kirby Fairfax, under his will probated at Upper Marlboro yesterday. Mrs Roberts, sister of Lord Fairfax, and her husband, also are named executors.

Lord Fairfax, who died in October at his English home in Essex County, was the only American-born member of the House of Lords. He had lived in England more than 30 years, inheriting the title of his ancestors. The last time he came to this country was in 1937, when he brought his two sons to visit the family estate, Northampton, at Landover.

Under the will, Lord Fairfax, eldest son, Thomas Bryan McKelvie, 16, will inherit Northampton on the death of the executors. Both the youth and his younger brother, John Peregrine Wishart Fairfax, 14, are students at Eton School.

The original home at Northampton was built in 1704. Destroyed by fire in 1909, it was replaced with a modern home. The gardens of the estate were laid out by L'Enfant.

Wife Saying She Was 'Charwoman' Wins $175 Alimony

Mrs. Betty Rosenberg, 57, of the 4700 block of Fourth street northwest, who told District Court she led a charwoman's life in the midst of riches, yesterday was granted $175 a month separate maintenance by Justice Jennings Bailey, of District Court.

Her husband, Meyer B. Rosenberg, 69, of the 4000 block of Fourteenth street northwest, also was ordered to pay $1,300 in fees to his wife's attorneys, Alvin L. Newmyer and Lewis H. Shapiro.

Mrs. Rosenberg told the court her husband was worth $200,000 and had an income of more than $5,000 a year, but "forced me to live as a charwoman in my own home."

Citizens Request Tightening of Zoning Rules

The Sligo Park Citizens Association with the support of representatives of other civic groups in Silver Spring and Takoma Park, Md., last night urged the Maryland Capital Park and Planning Commission to tighten its restrictions against apartment building in residential "A "zones.

The resolution climaxed a meeting in Jesup Blair Community House in which residents deplored "violations" of the law.

The Rev. William Steele, center of a community row because of a house he is now building, appeared before the association and assured members his new house would be a one-family dwelling in compliance with town regulations. Plans for his house were shown to the assembly.

J. Bond Smith, counsel to the Planning Commission, said the commission was working on a new ordinance that would limit the number of rooms in a one-family dwelling.

Girl Scouts Hear Smith On Traffic

Police Dread Last Few Days of Year As Busy Shoppers Add to Problems

Police, fearing a sharp increase in traffic accidents, "are looking forward with dread to the period from now until the end of the year, when people are shopping in a hurry," Capt. Milton Smith, of the traffic division, said last night.

Speaking to the chairmen and district leaders of the Girl Scouts of the Second Division, Capt. Smith said 78 persons have already been killed in District traffic accidents. Police are trying to keep this year's toll below last year's total of 86.

He said officials are studying the problem presented by pedestrian control in the downtown area. At busy times of the day, a steady flow of pedestrians prevents cars from turning, thus slowing traffic considerably.

"The automobile," he said, "is more dangerous than any machine gun ever invented—certainly it has accounted for more deaths.

"Twice as many people have been killed by autos between 1923 and 1939 as have died in all the wars in which the United States has been involved.

"All people are agreed that by educating children we are reducing the death toll. If we can do this with children, why can't we do it with adults?"

The back-seat driver should be encouraged, he said—"If more people cautioned others to drive safely, there would be fewer accidents."

League President Backs Halloran's Decision

Pro Referee To Officiate In Title Game

Storck Gets Report Of New York Battle And Clears Justice And Coach Flaherty

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, Dec. 5.—The National Professional Football League championship game here Sunday between the New York Giants and the Green Bay Packers will be refereed by William Halloran, of Providence, R. I., center of a disputed decision in recent Eastern Division title game.

League President Carl L. Storck, in announcing choice of officials tonight, said he believed Halloran "made a correct and fair decision" in his "no-good" ruling last Sunday on a field goal attempt which would have given Washington the Eastern title over New York.

Storck also announced Edward W. Cochrane, of Chicago, had been chosen umpire for the championship tilt; Dan Tehan, of Cincinnati, field judge, and Tom Thorpe, of New York, head linesman.

All Are Cleared

At the same time he ruled there had been "no flagrant violations of the rules by Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins, or Halfback Ed Justice" during the near-riot that followed Halloran's ruling invalidating the field goal attempt by Beau Russell, of Washington, in the last 45 seconds of play against the Giants. Had the kick been good it would have given Washington a one-point margin over the Giants, who won 9-7, and a cut in the title money amounting to more than $1,000 a man.

Flaherty protested the decision vehemently and Justice rushed Halloran as he walked off the field after the game, but was restrained before he could reach the official.

Storck said no fines or suspensions would be imposed.

He added, in a statement issued from National Football League headquarters set up here that:

Officials' Report

"Each of the four officials reported that there were no blows struck and that no abusive language was used. All four agree that Halloran made the correct and fair decision on the field goal . . . Flaherty could have been penalized 15 yards for running on the field, but under the circumstances, I think Halloran used good judgment.

"It was a regrettable situation, caused no doubt by a letdown, after such a tense and important game, but I believe Halloran made a correct and fair decision."

Redskins Ask Goal Posts Be Raised

Frank M. Dobson, veteran of 30 years' football coaching, yesterday submitted to the season's final luncheon meeting of the Football Writers Association of Washington a three-point plan designed to aid officials to more accurately judge field goal and extra point kicks.

Dobson's proposal, which was indorsed immediately by Redskin Owner George Marshall, and offered to the president of the National Professional League, is:

1. Extend the uprights of the goal posts to a minimum of 50 feet, instead of the present 20.

2. Order the field judge placed behind the goal posts on all attempts at extra points and field-goal attempts, and

3. Order the umpire and head linesman stationed on either side of the line of scrimmage on these kicks, so placed as to have clear sight of any offside or holding fouls and to still be able to follow the flight of the ball.

Marshall Acts

This proposal, coming hard on the heels of the disputed place kick on which the Redskins lost the Eastern Division title and about $50,000 in cash, found a ready sponsor in Marshall.

Quickly he drew up a proposal of his own, following closely Dobson's plan, and dispatched it to

Double No-Hit Star In 'Best' Physical Shape, Says Doc

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—Dr. Reed Shank, who has been examining Pitcher Johnny Vander Meer, reported today the young Cincinnati southpaw needed no appendectomy "or any other operation."

Vander Meer

"Vandy is in the best physical condition he has been in since I have known him," Dr. Shank declared.

Vander Meer, star of two consecutive no-hit, no-run games in 1938, was unable to train last spring because of abdominal trouble.

Nats' Travis-for-York Deal Hopes Diminish

Bartell for Rogell Swap Seen as Spike In Griffith's Plans to Get Hard-Hitting Catcher-First Baseman at Winter Meeting

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—Circumstances beyond their control today diminished the Nats' chances to complete the one player deal they came here with high hopes of making—the Travis-for-York trade with the Tigers.

The developments unfavorable to the Nats were:

1. The virtual completion by the Tigers of a deal with the Chicago Cubs that would bring Shortstop Bill Bartell to Detroit in exchange for Shortstop Bill Rogell, thus improving the Tigers' infield situation.

2. The entry of the Boston Red Sox into the bidding for York.

Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris came to the trading session prepared to dangle Cecil Travis and another player before the Tigers in an attempt to acquire the heavy-hitting York, desired as a first baseman by the Washington club.

The Tigers were considered open to trade talk. The Detroit club has been sorely in need of a shortstop, and with both Hank Greenberg and Rudy York available they were over-manned with first basemen. Travis was the medium by which the Nats' bosses hoped to pry York away from Detroit.

The tacit admission of Manager Del Baker that the Tigers had all but acquired Bartell from the Cubs was a blow to the Nats, however. Bartell, a star in the National League until last season when he encountered his worst year in the majors, is regarded as the type of shortstop who would remedy the Tigers' infield situation and cause them to cool toward the offer of Travis.

From the direction of Boston came the Nats' second blow of the day. The Red Sox, who are seeking York as a catcher, are in a better position to offer trading material than the Nats. The Red Sox are already reported to have offered the Detroit club catcher John Peacock, Outfielder Roger Cramer and Pitcher Fred Ostermueller for York.

Minor Leagues Want 'Farm' Rulings Eased

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—In one swift swoop today, the minor leagues told baseball's Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis they wanted restrictions on the big farm systems relaxed and also disposed of an impressive agenda of half a hundred proposed code changes.

The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues passed not one but several amendments upholding the rights of major league clubs to maintain and increase their relations with clubs of lesser classification.

The problem still had to come before the major leagues in their meetings beginning Thursday, when Commissioner Landis himself will be on hand. But most clubs in the majors were expected to be guided by the sentiment of the minors and there seemed no doubt that all of today's amendments would be incorporated promptly into the major-minor agreements.

Roughly, the rules passed today affecting Landis fell into three classifications:

1. Restrictions on an entire farm system in player transfers where

Tulane, Aggies Agree to Meet In Sugar Bowl

Cotton Bowl Offer Fails to Lure Two Of Nation's Leaders

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Dec. 5.—The New Orleans Midwinter Sports Association announced tonight that Tulane University and Texas A. and M. College had accepted invitations for their football teams to play in the Sugar Bowl here on New Year's Day.

Texas A. and M., undefeated and untied in ten games, is currently ranked as the Nation's No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll of sports editors. Tulane, which has been tied by North Carolina and won all the rest of its nine-game schedule, is No. 5.

The Sugar Bowl announcement climaxed a day in which an offer of $85,000 each to Texas A. and M. and Tennessee to play in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas failed to bring results.

For weeks it had been predicted that the Aggies, Southwest Conference champions, and Tulane, co-champions of the Southeastern Conference, would meet in the Sugar Bowl. Today's Cotton Bowl offer had created fears that the Texas representative would be diverted to the Dallas game.

Lambert Trophy Goes to Cornell

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Cornell University, unbeaten and untied Eastern grid champion, was awarded the Lambert Memorial Trophy at a dinner in Jack Dempsey's restaurant tonight.

Presented to Coach Carl Snavely by the Lambert brothers, Henry L. and Victor A., the trophy is emblematic of supremacy in Eastern football.

Sensational Rally Wins for Eagles, 5-2

Three Scores in Last Six Minutes Bring Hockey Victory Over Sea Gulls; 2,081 See Match at Riverside

By Jack Munhall.

The Washington Eagles played "Dead End Kids" for two periods and brilliant hockey for one session last night to come from behind and defeat the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 5-2, at Riverside Stadium in the roughest match of the season here.

The victory which kept 2,081 fans standing in their seats from start to finish as eleven penalties and a free-for-all were tossed into the riotous proceedings, elevated Redvers MacKenzie's team into a tie for second place with the Baltimore Orioles in the Eastern League.

But what may be more important that hard-earned triumph, earned by three quick goals in the final minutes, probably marked the beginning of a good winning streak for the local six. At home for their next two matches, with River Vale Friday and Baltimore the following Tuesday, the Eagles will have a fine chance to gain ground on the league-leading New York Rovers.

Eagles Hit Stride

After spending the first two periods—or 40 minutes in rough-housing it with the Sea Gulls, who apparently like their hockey that way—the Eagles settled down to business in the third stanza.

Three of their five points the Eagles crammed into the final hectic five minutes. Instead of blasting the Sea Gulls with stick, puck and fist in retaliation for similar tactics by the visitors, the Washingtons suddenly clicked and turned in one of their best offensive performances of the season.

Center Roy Covert and Wing Alan Kuntz—they were the heroes of the belated Eagles' drive which turned a fiercely fought and deadly close fray into a one-sided Washington victory. Covert, by a clever interception of an Atlantic City pass, started the drive. He shot the rubber to Kuntz, who took it on the dead run and completed a spectacular scoring play.

McQueston Scores

Crashing through the Gulls' two burly defense men he roared down on Goalie Henry McQueston. A swift feint of his body to the left pulled McQueston out of position and made him easy prey for a rapid-fire shot which set the red light blinking at 16:20.

The Gulls, trying desperately then to deadlock the score again, set up the last two Eagles' goals by their necessarily reckless chance-taking. As soon as one of their number got possession of the puck, the two Atlantic City defensemen joined the front line in a savage charge which carried inside the Eagles' blue line.

There a miraculous save by Goalie Gordon Lee and another by Bill (Stinky) Davis checked the Gulls and then Kuntz took the bounding puck, slid a pass to a cutting teammate, "Admiral" Dewey, who tried a shot from about 20 feet out. The shot missed its mark, but Covert, following up quickly, shoved the puck in and the red light blinked at 16:46. Thus did the Eagles score twice in about half a minute to clinch the game.

The free for all fight between players of both teams came, more or less expected after repeated minor violations, late in the second period. After a spirited exchange of body checks right in front of the penalty box, Johnny McTeer, Washington defense man, and Norm Tustin

Pinckert Wed In Alexandria; Farkas Next

Ernie Pinckert, the Redskin's great blocking back who has led the way for his running mate, Andy Farkas, so often, did it again yesterday — this time it was a surprise dash to the altar in Alexandria.

FARKAS

The big former All-American from the University of Southern California was married to Mildred Kadlec Parenicka, pretty 29-year-old California blonde, by the Rev. C. C. Bell that was culminated in such secrecy that only one of his teammates, Jim Barber, had any inkling of the impending nuptials.

With the final "I do" in the little Virginia town, Pinckert again was taking up the familiar role of paving the way for Farkas, the National League's leading scorer.

Announcement that Farkas and Ellen Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Ryan, of Detroit, will be married Tuesday at St. Mary's Church in Redford, Mich., came on the heels of the discovery of the Pinckert ceremony. Farkas and Miss

Readers' Letters On Field Goal 'Miss' Invited

Beginning tomorrow morning, The Post will publish representative letters from readers who have sent in their opinions on the disputed field goal "miss" which cost the Washington Redskins the Eastern Division championship.

Anyone, regardless of whether he saw the game in New York Sunday, is eligible to submit his opinion, and if he chooses, and suggestion as to howsuch a happening can be averted in the future.

This contest, in case anyone is not familiar with his football history, was provoked by the storm of protests from District fans who claim the Bo Russell's last second place kick against the Giants was good. Referee Bill Halloran ruled it was not. So, officially, it isn't.

But wasn't it? Most say yes, a few say no. What do you say?

Let's hear from you, and you, and you.

Griff, and 'Dummy' Meet Again

Nat Owner, William Hoy Played for White Sox Pennant Winners of '01

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—A little old man came slowly through the smoky mist of the hotel lobby and wrote on a slip of paper, "do you know where I can find Connie Mack and Clark Griffith?"

A quick look around showed neither and the little an wrote again, "I am William Hoy. I used to play with them. They called me Dummy. I haven't seen Griffith since 1901, when I was on his White Sox."

Telephoning to their rooms produced nothing and even veteran page boys could locate few people in that lobby. Hank Gowdy, the "Old Golden Rod" of the Cincinnati Reds whose memory goes back to George Stallings and the 1914 Braves, came up.

"Dummy Hoy!" he exclaimed. "I'll find Griffith."

He did. The "Old Fox" of Washington came to the cigar stand, took

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—It's a lie, and it just goes to show how some people exaggerate. Ernie Lombardi is not still lying in the dust at home plate in Crosley Field where the Yankees left him on October 8.

We can vouch for the fact that home plate in the Reds park is now as empty as was Lombardi's noggin in that tenth inning of the final game of the 1939 world series. That was the day when, with Yankees on the bases, the big catcher guarded the plate with all the effectiveness of a brigade of Benedict Arnolds.

POVICH

Some time ago . . . at least a week ago, we understand . . . Lombardi picked himself up, looked around at the empty park, blinked a couple of times, and then suddenly decided that the 1939 world series must be over. So he went home.

It was a blow to Cincinnati guide agencies, we hear. Because until Ernie roused himself, they were reaping a harvest from visitors to the city by including the slumbering figure of Lombardi as a high point of interest.

Lombardi is not still lying at home plate, but on October 8 he was lying still at home plate, a fact which the Yankees properly appreciated. For a time, after Charley Keller knocked Ernie loose from the ball on a close play at the plate, it appeared as if rigor mortis had set in. Anyway, Joe DiMaggio, who had reached third by that time, did a soft-shoe number to the plate without disturbing Ernie's slumbers, which probably gave rise to the story that Ernie had suddenly decided to hole up for the winter.

Trade Winds Blow Hot and Cold

Twelve hundred baseball men have been in Cincinnati for two days with 60 baseball writers eavesdropping, but thus far the only things that have been traded are handshakes, and the only shifts that have been made are from one foot to another.

The corridor gossip, however, is terrific. Reports that the Indians, White Sox and Browns were cooking up an eight-player trade swept the hotel lobby when Managers Vitt, Dykes and Haney were observed in earnest conversation, but they met with a triple denial. Dykes admitted that he had talked with Vitt and Haney. "They wanted to know," said Dykes with a wink, "if I thought it looked like snow."

Another manager was an equally fertile source of information. He was asked if his club was talking trade with the Nats. "I dunno," he said, "you'll have to ask our club owner, he makes all the deals."

Well, was his club looking for a shortstop?

"You'll have to ask the club president. I can't say," was the reply.

It was suggested that it was a warm day for this season of the year.

"Better ask the club president. I don't want to be put on a spot."

Old Fox to Seek Rule Modification

When the two big leagues go into executive session on Thursday, Clark Griffith again will attempt to modify the present rule and give the pitchers more freedom in swinging their legs on the rubber.

It is a very technical matter, the business of changing the rule to permit the pitcher to gain momentum for his delivery. In fact it is so technical it is bruited about that only Clark Griffith and Connie Mack understand the proposed rule.

The 70-year-old owner of the Nats, who used to be a pitcher himself, drew a sizable gallery when he stopped in the lobby to illustrate the way in which a pitcher would benefit from his proposed rules change. Only the pitchers among the onlookers had the faintest idea of what Griffith was trying to demonstrate.

"It'll be a great help to the pitchers," said Griffith, and if the other club owners, none of whom ever faced a batter, pass the new rule they'll simply be taking Griffith's word for it.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 5.—"Dear Sir, you treasonous rat," begins a stack of mash notes your passive correspondent has received these past few days from patriots here and there in the country.

Their ire mainly was aroused by a piece of ours revealing the shocking news that Army and Navy had bad football teams. This revelation corresponded roughly to fateful announcement that Wednesday will follow Tuesday this week, but most of the letter-writers looked upon the piece as a reason for deportation.

CONSIDINE

Most of them felt that because we said what was all too obvious, that the greatest crowd of the year would gather to see what looked like the football futility title record, we slandered the entire Cadet and Midshipmen Corps and hurled a mud pie at the Constitution, which, of course, we didn't.

A Pittsburgh admirer, who forgot his name, writes, "that article was one of the most treasonable acts ever committed, you cheap news correspondent. The Army-Navy game should be held sacred. Its players stand for the highest thing that America can give. I represent the sentiments of every American man."

Joe Gish Comes Through

A New Yorker with the interesting name of "One Who Holds Dear to his heart the finer things in our country," writer, "You scum, trying to ruin the only clean traditional game played all year.. If you haven't been jailed, you should apologize. Where is your sense of fair play at?"

Most of the midshipmen and cadets who write in, of course, signed their names. "Dear (censored)," writes Cadet Joe Gish, "what's the matter—couldn't you get a ticket to the game?"

Future admiral with the curious name of "A Disgusted Midshipman," demands, "Who are you to judge whether the game was worth $4.40? . . . You don't seem to realize that perhaps there is something more to playing football than the mere winning of games. It takes a man to back a losing team. I agree with you that the two service teams were not the mightiest in the land. Not by a long shot, but I'll guarantee that every man, women and child in Municipal Stadium received $4.40 worth of action and thrills. They saw two of the fightingest teams that ever pulled on football suits, each backed by 2,000 men playing each play with the players and cheering with all they possess.

"So, take your cheapening article and if you're half a man, which I doubt, you'll retract everything you said. Put this in your column and give your readers the truth, if they can stand it."

"It Can and Shall Be Done"

"It must be great to sit back in a steam-heated office and criticize men who sweat their innards out in a conscientious effort to make a good football team," writes a midshipman named "It Can and Shall Be Done." "If you think it is such a robbery to charge $4.40 and $5.50 I don't believe any one will miss you. It seems to me that it ill behooves anyone to pan the United States Navy that might protect them from foreign invaders in time of war."

Another Annapolitan writes on faculty stationery: "Why don't you do something constructive for us, instead of tearing us down? Unlike most universities, scholarships aren't dished out here to players. The average college football ace is taking a snap course, and this course is even fixed in addition, so that he can remain eligible. We get our men for their brains, not their brawn. Millions throng to the Army-Navy game because they know they are going to see two teams made up of hard-working, honest candidates for the officers of our two great services."

There were a couple of others, from people who seemed to think it was okay to say that the only thing worth $4.40 at Philadelphia was the floor show put on by the two corps. But all they said was that they liked it—which never looks very good when reprinted. Only one of these was a combatant, so to speak. It came from an Annapolis lady who wrote, "We enjoyed your blast. If only it might remotely improve Navy's type of football, or make it possible for any alumnus less than a brass hat to get a seat between the end zones!"

Dobson Will Coach 'Nearby'

West Virginia, Richmond Are Rumors

Announcement of '40 Position to Be Made Dec. 14; Carnegie Tech Also in Running

By Jack Munhall.

Frank Dobson, recently resigned as head football coach at the University of Maryland, will take over the grid leadership of a "nearby" college next fall, it was learned yesterday.

In reply to a question of "What are your plans for next year, do you intend to continue to coach football?" the lean, graying gentleman, whose popularity in local sports circles is almost without precedent, replied:

"I certainly do intend to coach football in 1940. As a matter of fact I am already signed."

Someone then expressed the hope that Dobson would be nearby so as not to lose contact with his many friends in the District.

To this the suave Dobson smiled and said:

"I can tell you this much. I won't be far away."

Announcement December 14

Announcement of Dobson's new coaching position will be made December 14, he divulged, but could say no more owing to a pledge of "secrecy."

Dobson's statement that he would be coaching college football nearby immediately set listeners to speculating. Two schools at once were brought to mind. West Virginia, where "Sleepy" Glenn has just resigned as head coach, and Richmond where Dobson coached for many years.

Richmond, despite a winning season this year, is reportedly dissatisfied with the coaching methods of Glenn Thistlewaite and, according to reliable information, will replace him for next season.

West Virginia Likely

West Virginia, however, seems a more likely spot for Dobson as coach and director of athletics. The Mountaineers have always had a quantity of big, rugged material. They have a favorable athletic setup and a "name" in Eastern college football.

Should West Virginia have promised to cooperate fully with Dobson and give him a free rein, the chances are bright that this is the job he has accepted.

The former Maryland coach often has remarked that West Virginia was an ideal place to coach, because of its material and athletic facilities. The school, once a power in football, has been on the down grade for several years, experiencing particularly bad seasons in 1938 and again this season.

Recently there were rumors of a sweeping shake-up, provoked by disgruntled alumni who demanded a winning football team. It is reported that these alumni asked the release of every member of the football coaching staff, except Ira Rodgers who has been on the West Virginia campus as player and coach for 25 years. Rodgers was the Mountaineers' only all-America gridman.

Also rumored to be seeking a new football coach is Carnegie Tech. Advices from Pittsburgh indicate that Kill Kern will not be with the Plaid next year. Dobson has good connections in the Smoky City, being a former first baseman of the Pirates' baseball team and present talent scout for the Pittsburgh Ball Club.

Kern, according to popular gossip, will be offered the job of head coach of the Brooklyn football Dodgers, a position resigned recently by Potsy Clark.

Kern and Jock Sutherland are names which have been often associated with West Virginia. Sutherland is known reliably to have refused the Mountaineers' offer after inspecting the set-up.

Dobson will leave Washington December 14 or 15 for Presidio (Spanish for fort) in Monterey, Calif., to join his son, Jack, who is stationed there with the Eleventh Cavalry. Young Dobson is a graduate of West Point.

Dobson will remain on the Coast for an indefinite time. He will, he said, see the Rose Bowl game.

A.A.U. to Probe Cunningham's Mile Mark

Legality of 4:04.4 Record on Dartmouth Oval to Be Considered

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, Dec. 5.—Legality of running records set on Dartmouth University's famous board track will be a question before the records committee of the Amateur Athletic Union at a meeting Friday in Miami, Fla., preceding the Union's convention opening there Saturday.

An anonymous letter writer has raised the question, contending that the track does not have a curb entirely around it as provided in A. A. U. rules. Paul R. Jordan, of Indianapolis, chairman of the records committee, made the letter public today and said the matter would be investigated thoroughly.

"If our investigation discloses the track is unfair," Jordan added, "I'll recommend that all records set on it be wiped out and the old marks reinstated. If we find the track is fair, then nothing will be done."

It was on the Dartmouth track, often called the fastest running strip in the world, that Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, ran his record-breaking 4:04.4 mile a few years ago. John Borican, New Jersey negro flash, set new marks of 1:49.8 and 1:49.2 for the half mile and 800 meters, respectively, on the track last winter and the Fordham University mile relay team set a new mark of 3:15.2.

The three latter marks are among 16 applications for recognition of new track and field records to be considered by the A. A. U. records committee at Miami.

The letter received by Jordan set out that there is a 2-inch curb at both ends of the track but that there is no curb along the straightaways. The sender inclosed two photographs designed to show that runners raced inside a painted border line. The writer identified himself as a member of a relay team whose record was beaten on the Dartmouth track.

Only three of the applications for new American records are for outdoor events. One is the 2:09.3 performance in the 1,000-yard run by Charles Fenske, formerly of the University of Wisconsin, at Milwaukee last June 2. Another is the 9:55.2 turned in by Tommy Deckard, formerly of Indiana University, last January 1 at New Orleans in the 2-mile steeplechase, and the third is the 55 foot 10¾ inch shotput heave at Los Angeles last June 16 by Elmer Hackney, Kansas State Agricultural College's "One Man Gang."

Borican has applications for three indoor marks. In addition to his half-mile and 800-meter performances he is seeking recognition of a record of 2:08.8 for 1,000 yards set at New York last March 11.

Herbert Thompson, of New York, asks recognition of two marks—6.1 seconds for the 60-yard dash and 6.6 seconds for the 60-meter dash.

Applications also will be considered by the committee for 23 new men's American swimming records and 19 women's marks.

National Women's Club Sold or Leased

Believed Rented for Use as Course With Option to Buy on Expiration Of Contract; Owners Say Nothing

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The National Women's Golf Club, the nine-hole public layout on Bradley boulevard, has been either sold or leased for a number of years, according to reports yesterday.

Although the owners of the property had nothing to say on the matter, it is believed the property has been rented to be used as a golf course, with the possibility of adding nine more holes with an option to buy when the rental contract expires.

Capt. I. Mishtowt, former Naval Attache of the Russian Embassy, and a veteran of the Russo-Japanese and World Wars, who has managed the club since 1935, was told by a representative of the out-of-town real estate firm that owns the property that the new owner or lessee would take over January 1.

The course was built in 1929 by the National Woman's Club, then a powerful organization, but it was under their control for just a short time. It has been used as a semi-public layout since the early 1930's. Capt. Mishtowt came to the club in 1932 and with his wife took over complete management in 1935.

The 9-hole golf course is short but has one of the finest actual layouts in the country. It is also used as an apartment-hotel, with many available rooms in the annex.

The new owner is reported ready to add nine more holes to the course, located between Bethesda and the Congressional Country Club. Room is available back of the present nine but golf architects have called the land, used as fields for many years, as not practicable for a golf course.

The clubhouse has been there since many years before the war. The row of trees up to the lane to the clubhouse were planted by the members of the National Women's Club, in honor of the outstanding women in the world at that time.

The sale or leasing of the property comes close on the heels of the recent sale of the Indian Spring course, that will lead to the ultimate ruination of the Silver Spring layout. There may be a connection between the two that would have the new National Women's taking the place of Indian Spring in the city's golf courses.

J. Barret Carter, representative of the firm that owns the property, is out of town but will return in a day or two and is expected to give out full information on the deal.

Capt. and Mrs. Mishtowt have not decided on their future, as they were only told of the new management on Monday.

Jocko Miller is professional of the club at this time.

Mondorff Due To Join Terp Five Tuesday

Pershing Mondorff, only three-letter athlete on the University of Maryland campus, will be ready for the Terps' basketball opening with Western Maryland Tuesday. The big senior, injured on the first play in Maryland's final football game, appears fully recovered, according to announcement yesterday.

If Mondorff takes his regular position in the line-up Coach Burt Shipley will have veterans at every position but center, which will be occupied by Sophomore Mearle DuVall. George DeWitt and Adam Bengoechea will be the forwards, and Milton Mulitz will team with Mondorff at guards. Mulitz is returning to the game after a year's absence. He is a former Tech High School star.

In reserve to the starting five will be Leon Vannais, and Bob Porter, sophomores; Bill Rea, Charley Weidinger and Edwin Miller, seniors. The last two named are making their basketball debuts this season.

Both Weidinger and Miller are tested competitors, however. Weidinger for three years was a mainstay of the Maryland eleven and in 1938 was chosen at that position on The Post's all-District team. Miller is one of the South's best high jumpers.

Heurich League Is Expanded

The Heurich Amateur Basketball League yesterday expanded to 12 members with the entrance of two new teams into the circuit.

A combination comprised of Eddie Johnson, George Knepley and other former University of Maryland athletes, is to operate under the sponsorship of Carr Bros. and Boswell, of Hyattsville, Md., while three former St. Francis players are to headline the Marvin's Credit Five. Both clubs will open their Heurich League schedules next week.

A Heurich Amateur Basketball League double-header scheduled for the Heurich gymnasium tonight brings together Jewish Community Center vs. Bantam Press, 8 o'clock, and Federal Bureau of Investigation vs. Garvin's Grill, 9 o'clock.

Sarazen and Ghezzi Are Guests Of Cox in Congressional Match

2 Star Golfers Stop Here En Route to $10,000 Miami Open; Host Tops Afternoon's Rounds

Wiffy Cox was host for a day to two of the Nation's most prominent pros yesterday at Congressional, when Gene Sarazen, the "Connecticut farmer," and his traveling companion, Vic Ghezzi, stopped here en route to Miami and the $10,000 open December 14-17.

Ghezzi, the Deal, N. J., pro, who was named to the Ryder cup team, now merely an honorary team, played golf with Gene Pittman, the Congressional Club champion as a partner against Cox and Jack McCarron, but the Ghezzi-Pittman duo couldn't compete with Wiffy's three-under par 69, aided by four birdies from McCarron.

Sarazen, who claims the round was his first since September as his golf interferred with his farming, played with Brian Bell, manager of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press, and was around in 74, just two over perfect figures.

They plan to leave this morning for Camden, S. C., then Aiken, Augusta, and take things easy until the start of the Miami Open. Sarazen plans to return to his home and make a return trip, while Ghezzi's plans include the winter circuit.

Sarazen, who ranks with Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones as pro golf's most illustrous figures, attended the ice hockey game last night with Ghezzi and Cox.

Six Little Generals on All-Northern Virginia Grid Team

Presidents And Monroe Place Two

All of Washington-Lee Eleven Selected On First Two Teams; Warrenton Winner

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 5.—The little Generals of Washington-Lee High School, Arlington, undisputed holders of sectional grid laurels and, rated by many as the classiest high school eleven in the State, dominated the 1939 All-Northern Virginia High School football squad, picked today by coaches and sports writers of the section.

Six of Coach Johny Baker's Generals won positions on the first team and five on the second team—the first time since the custom was started in 1924 that every member of a school's starting lineup received post-season recognition.

George Washington High, of Alexandria, and James Monroe High, of Fredericksburg, placed two each on the first eleven and Warrenton High one.

On the second team, George Washington placed three, Warrenton High two and James Monroe High one.

Warrenton High, the smallest school in the circuit, romped through its schedule undefeated to win the Eastern Virginia Class C crown, and landed its quarterback, Carlston Booth, on the first team.

Northern Virginia hasn't seen in years, if ever, a collection of stars to equal the 1939 Washington-Lee eleven. Arnaud, 190-pounder of the little General backfield, was popular choice with the pickers and was given the right to captain the mythical eleven. Trailing him by only a vote were his teammates, Kelly, Hoover and French.

Redskins Seek Higher Goal Posts

Carl C. Storck, National League president.

This proposal will be put to vote at the next league meeting and if approved by two-thirds of the ten club owners will be included in the 1940 rules.

Called upon to make his usual talk, the former Maryland coach, who also has coached at Clemson, Richmond and several other schools, first paid tribute to Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins.

Praises Flaherty

"Flaherty," he said, "is in a class by himself when it comes to getting the most out of his players.

"There may be another coach who can get as much or more from his material," Dobson added, "but until I see him then I shall not believe it."

Then, after commenting on the unfortunate place kick by Bo Russell which has provoked a storm of protests from those who insist it passed between the goal posts for 3 points, which would have given the Redskins a 10-9 victory over the Giants, he offered his plan.

In explanation, he pointed out that in modern football, developed into such a perfected art, there should be no such incidents as occurred Sunday at the Polo Grounds.

"With so much at stake it is indeed regrettable that a cloud of doubt has been cast on the Giants' victory. Personally, though I attended that game, I cannot say whether Russell's kick was good. I was not in position to judge. But for that matter only one official—the referee—was where he could really see the direction of that kick.

"That is a condition which should not exist. And I hope those present," and he nodded to several college coaches and to Marshall, "will call it to the attention of professional and college rule-makers."

'Dummy' Hoy Stirs Baseball Memories

one look, and haltingly greeted "Dummy" with his fingers.

"Dummy Hoy," he said aloud. "My old lead-off man when we won the pennant in Chicago. One of the great players of baseball. One of the first to play centerfield short.

"I had to learn the sign language to talk to him then and I can still do it. Let's see . . . This was the hit-and-run sign."

He spelled it out slowly on his fingers and "Dummy" waved a bat and started for first.

Someone said Connie Mack had gone into the restaurant for lunch.

"We'll get him out," Griffith announced. He spelled out, "Wait right here."

Shortly he returned with the great man of Philadelphia. Connie raised his hand, thought a minute, and then gave the sign for the letter "S."

"Steal," Griffith translated, and Hoy laughed.

The three of them sat down, Hoy, as happy a man as ever found old friends, told them of all that had happened to him.

He lives a retired life in Cincinnati now, but the big baseball meeting brought him something he had wanted for a long, long time.

One Happy Family—American League Pilots Talk Shop

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Griffith Deal For Rudy York Seen Blocked

Baker would admit that they had broached the subject of a Washington-Detroit trade at this meeting. "We discussed it a couple of times during the season," said Harris, "but it hasn't come up yet in Cincinnati."

Harris' "yet" may be significent. He knows that he cannot talk trade with the Tigers until Walter O. Briggs, Detroit owner, appears on the scene and Briggs will not arrive from his vacation at Phoenix, Ariz., until tomorrow night.

A Quick Trader

At that time Baker is scheduled to go to his boss with the various offers for York, and the feeling here is that any deal that may be made will be made quickly.

"Mr. Briggs is that sort of a man," said Baker. "He doesn't dally much when he wants to make a trade."

There is a well-defined report here that Briggs may overrule Baker and include Hank Greenberg in a trade in preference to York. Once a close friend and admirer of York, the wealthy Detroit owner is known to have soured on his veteran first baseman.

"Briggs believes that Greenberg did not give his best efforts to the Tigers last year," declared a source close to the Detroit club. "Briggs paid Hank $30,000 for the season and, businessman that he is, he expected Hank to hit 50 home runs for that kind of pay. There was a time when Briggs and Greenberg were chums, but that is no longer the case. He has showed a decided preference for York."

That the Tigers are determined to trade either York or Greenberg is apparent. "We need an infielder, an outfielder and a pitcher, and we'd be stupid to keep two first-basemen around if we have a chance to help ourselves," said Baker. "We're waiting for the best offers."

Aside from Travis, Griffith and Harris have little to offer. Any show of willingness to trade Dutch Leonard or George Case would bring a flood of bids, but the Nats' bosses are in no mood to trade that pair. And Griffith is keen also to hang onto his southpaw pair of Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas, who also would command a purry of offers.

The Nats' faith in the ability of Rookie Jim Pofahl to handle a big-league shortstop job is, of course, the underlying reason for the willingness to trade Travis. And Manager Harris was no little elated today when he heard Pofahl described as "the best shortstop in the minors last season."

Ft. Myer Launches Indoor Show Season

Series of Four Equine Exhibitions Starts Wednesday and Lasts Until March; Smacko, Ring Master to Be Featured

By Anne Hagner

The winter indoor horse show season opens next Wednesday evening with Fort Myer's first in a series of four shows, to be held in the riding hall at the post.

Washington, Maryland and Virginia horsemen, idle since October, are champing at the bit for their first shot at the hunter and open jumping championships of the series, to be awarded at the March show on the basis of points won in each of the four events.

Included in the entry list will be Capt. Charles B. McClelland's Smacko, last year's open jumper champion, who was considered by many to be one of the outstanding horses in the National Horse Show held last month in New York. Capt. McClelland's big bay was tops in the military division of Madison Square Garden's horsey extravaganza, when mounts representing Chile, Mexico and the United States were turning in performances that were slightly disappointing to the experts.

Bogley to Show

Another certain exhibitor is Samuel E. Bogley, who recently purchased last year's reserve champion, Ring Master, from Fred Hughes, jr., and is now prepping the former circus mount for the Myer series. Ring master, for several years a member of Tim McCoy's circus, is quite at home when jumping indoors and is expected to go well during the current season.

The open jumpers will have Margaret Cotter's Rocksie to contend with this year in the championship race. In 1938 Miss Cotter's good horse was high in the list of point winners in the open division, but his owner neglected to enter him in one class that counted toward the tri-color and, according to the rules, Rocksie was thus ineligible for the award. Fortunately, he had appeared in all the hunter events, so Miss Cotter concentrated on that division in the final stages of the series and emerged from the battle with the championship over Jane Kromer's Jinwich.

Entries Numerous

Others who are expected to show include Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman's Lady Jack, Mrs. N. H. McDowell's Modern Melody, Fort Myer's Eyes Delight, Sandy and Clipped Wings, also frequent ribbon-winners in the National; Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Col. George S. Patton's Helenist, Dr. Yates, Konohiki and Keanokolu, and a long list of others.

In addition to the usual hunter and jumper classes, Col. A. W. Roffe, manager of the show, is planning a championship for student teams.

Bonura Is Headed For Phils if Pay Demands Are O. K.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cincinnati, Dec. 5.—Zeke Bonura is headed for the Phillies but his salary demands may balk the deal now brewing with the Giants.

BONURA

All clubs in both leagues waived on the big first baseman at the end of last season but within the last week the Phillies have communicated to Manager Bill Terry of the Giants that they would take him at the $7,500 waiver price.

Terry has expressed a willingness to trade Bonura at that figure but he has advised the Phillies that Bonura would expect a $15,000 salary. The Phillies are unwilling to sign him at that salary, it was reported here tonight.

Minor Leagues Want 'Farm' Rulings Eased

Landis Disapproval of 'Working Agreements' Blasted in Hot Session

2. Rules regarding player transfers cannot be interpreted to mean anything more than is stated.

3. Representatives of one club can be empowered to sign players to contracts for affiliated clubs.

One of the most sweeping moves of the meeting, which continued without lunch-time pause until virtually every question facing the juniors had been settled, brought a unanimous vote in favor of an amendment which reads:

"Working agreements shall be permitted and the words 'club and/or clubs' as used in this section or elsewhere in the National Association agreement shall be interpreted in strict accordance with section 4 of article 20."

Landis announced last September that he would consider this rule had been superseded by a clause in the major-minor agreement (section 11-I). Both rules concern transfer of players.

The first says that every club shall be considered a separate unit irrespective of its stock ownership or affiliations, and the second that a club making an outright assignment of a player to a club of lower classification could not reacquire him until he had been subject to draft.

Landis' interpretation was that the player not only could be regained by the same club, but also that he couldn't be taken by any other affiliated club.

The amendment passed today concerning interpretations stated: "All rules and regulations passed or adopted by the minor leagues are to be construed and interpreted in strict accordance with the provisions of this section (rule 20, article 4) unless specifically exempted therefrom."

After the meeting, President William G. Bramham admitted that this was a positive expression of the club owners against the commissioner construing the rules to conform with his own ideas.

Dupont Circle Pinman Sets Season Mark

Dick Myers Posts 176 but Teammates Lose 2-1 Decision

Despite a season record game of 177 rolled by Dick Meyers, the Dupont Circle five lost at 2-1 decision to Cherner last night in the Commercial League at Chevy Chase Ice Palace. Meyers' performance shaded the 176 turned in earlier by Paul Jarman.

Hot Shoppe swept team honors with 669 and 1,765, at the same time winning three games from Stu-Box. The best the league leaders, President Valet, could get was individual set honors, a 417 by Harry Corvelli.

LUCKY STRIKE—

Sherman Pinkard, of the Elm team, supplied the highlight of Agriculture-Forest Service Mixed bowling, registering a 387 set to break his own season record by eight pins. His 133 game was also high, though the Elms were edged out in their match with Locusts. The best girl roller was Alice McQuinn, of Osage, who had set of 327.

Earle Melwick, of Finance, paced a three-game victory over Management in the U. S. Housing Authority League with 139 game and 363 set.

Ties for individual honors were the rule in the Distributors League. Joe Caplan and Walter Osin each had 134 game, and Caplan paired with Sam Gordon to split set honors, 352.

Ladies' Catholic League high marks were taken by Frances Kaiser, of Holy Comforter, and E. Greco, of St. Gabriel's. They had 137 and 332, respectively, for game and set.

QUEEN PIN

With high game and set, 147 and 385, Frank Caruso paced his Hotel team to an odd-game victory over the Diamond League leaders, Service Station. Caruso's five strikes made his total 26 and gave him the lead in that department over E. Wesley, whose record is 23.

The only three-game victory in the Fire Department League was checked in by Third Battalion "A" over Sixth Battalion "B." The "A" five managed for high individual set 385, though Third Battalion "B," which took two games from Second Battalion, had best individual game, 134, and team honors, 1,552 and 554.

Arcadia Alleys

With a high game and set of 135—383, L. Roudabush, of St. Mathews, paced the Lutheran Church League for men last night, while Vi Dorne, of Atonement, with 119 high game, and Rhoda Hennig, of Trinity, No. 1, with high set, 347, shared honors in the ladies' division.

St. Matthews took high team game honors with 572, and St. Pauls No. 1 had 1,633 high set for men. The Trinity No. 1 women rollers took high game and set, 519—1,463.

In the Railroad Retirement Ladies League, F. Weigner, of the Mountaineers, had high game and set, 110—334. Capital Limited took high game, with 472, and the Diplomats had 1,357 high set.

Booth Is Named 'Most Valuable' By Coach Reinhart

Bill Reinhart, head football coach at George Washington, yesterday paid tribute to Murphy Booth, his blocking back, as "most valuable" to his team during the 1939 season.

Admitting that Bob Nowaskey is a truly outstanding end, Reinhart nevertheless held that Booth in his position was more indispensable to the Colonial eleven.

Reinhart also lauded Frank August, a sophomore end, as a "coming star" and predicted an improved G. W. eleven for next season.

"We lose two key men in Tackles Sunny Jones and Duce Keahey and they undoubtedly will be hard to replace. However, our freshman team this season is one of the best in the school's history and I feel certain that we can turn up a couple of good tackles.

Baltimorean Wins Blocking Back Trophy

By the Associated Press

Clinton, S. C., Dec. 5.—Jimmy Ringgold, of Baltimore, a junior at Wake Forest College, was announced today as winner of the Jacobs Trophy, awarded annually to the football player voted the best blocking back in the Southern Conference. Willard Eaves, Duke, was runner-up.

The selections is made by vote of the coaches in the conference.

Ringgold, already chosen as winner of the Millis Trophy for the best blocking back in North Carolina, will receive his conference trophy at a banque here December 12.

W. P. Jacobs, president of Presbyterian College, who established the award seven years ago, offers similar trophies for the State of South Carolina and for the Southeastern Conference. June Moore, of Presbyterian College, was named the best blocker in the State; the Southeastern winner will be announced later.

Coach Bergman Well Pleased With Season

Showing of His C. U. Team Satisfies Him; 1940 Outlook Dark

A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, Catholic University football coach, yesterday told the luncheon meeting of the Football Writers' Association of Washington that he was greatly pleased with the showing of his team this season.

But in the next breath he warned that that success was not likely to be approached by next year's team because of a scarcity of good freshman material. There are only 14 players on the current C. U. yearling squad.

The Cardinals, who won eight of nine games and were mentioned as a strong contender for the Eastern assignment in the Orange Bowl until they were upset by St. Anselm, will lose seven regulars by graduation.

They are Louis Shine, end; Al Calabrese and Art Sabo, guards; Rocco Pirro, fullback; Carmen Pirro, tackle, and Joe Guyon, halfback.

In addition C. U. will be missing many dependable reserves, including Pete Osinski, center; Frank Krawzell, John Fiorellino and Nick Sarelas, backs, and Joe Bunsa and George DuBois, guards.

Clemson Five Plays Colonial and Terps

Clemson, S. C., Dec. 5 (AP).—Clemson College's basketball team, defending Southern Conference champion, will play 18 games this season.

The card includes:

December 21 Kentucky at Asheville, N. C.; 30, University of Baltimore at Baltimore, Md.

January 1, Maryland at College Park, Md.; 2, George Washington at Washington; 23, Georgia at Athens, Ga.; 27, Maryland here.

Hoya Five Strengthened for Game With Terrors Tonight

Allen Matuza, 'Red' Daly Join Squad

Georgetown Opens Home Season at 8:30 O'Clock at Tech Gym; Prelim Game at 7

Georgetown University's basketball team will be strengthened by the reporting of two football playing stars when the Hoya Varsity opens its 1939-40 home season against Western Maryland's Green Terrors at Tech High School's gymnasium, 8:30 o'clock tonight.

In a 7 o'clock supporting feature the Red Raiders of Western High School, are to oppose Georgetown University's freshman team.

Allen Matuza, center, and Francis "Red" Daly, guard and center, were football veterans who reported yesterday and were pressed into service immediately. Both will see service tonight, but neither will be started.

Following the return to action of Matuza a letter man, Coach Elmer Ripley announced that Al Lujak, one of the best prospects among his sophomores, will be shifted from center to a forward and that Matuza and Jim Giebel will be used at the pivot post.

Lujak, a good floor man and fine shot, looms as one of the brighest prospects enrolled at the Hilltop of recent years and will bear close watching.

The Hoyas, defeated by the University of Baltimore last Saturday night, will meet a more experienced club in Western Maryland.

Ripley will start tonight's game with the same line-up that answered the opening whistle against Baltimore, namely: George Pajac and Dick Dieckleman, forwards; Jim Giebel, center, and Capt. John Schmitt and Irving Rizzi, guards.

Giebel, a 6-foot 2-inch center, formerly was an all-District schoolboy selection with the St. John's Cadets. He was an all-Catholic schoolboy choice in 1937 when he established himself as one of the outstanding players of the Chicago National Tournament.

Return of Ed Shore Bolsters Bostonians As They Rally to Win

By the Associated Press

Boston, Dec. 5.—The Boston Bruins celebrated the return of Eddie Shore into their midst by defeating the New York Americans, 2 to 1, tonight before about 10,000 at the Boston Garden.

The triumph, the second over the National Hockey League's star-spangled forces in three nights, enabled the Stanley Cup champions to move into a second-place tie with LesCanadiens.

Shore had been excused for the remainder of the season by the Bruins to enable him to devote all of his attention to his own Springfield International-American club. The all-star defense man volunteered, however, to fill in for Bill (Flash) Hollett, absent because of the death of his small son.

Shore's return was more than timely, for it was he who registered the unassisted tally that enabled the Bruins to come from behind in the second period. Early in the finale, Roy Conacher rammed the "Clincher" though both Wilf Field and Goalie Earl Robertson, after taking an around the net pass from Bill Cowley at the left side of the Americans' net.

Murray Armstrong tallied for the New Yorkers late in the first period. The Americans' center lined up with Cowley just outside of the Boston Blue line, beat his rival slashing for the puck and then regained it by driving through the Boston defensemen and rapping it through Goalie Frank Brimsek.

Score by periods:

Americans	1	0	0	—1
Bruins	0	1	1	—2

First period—New York, Armstrong (unassisted), 17:51. Second period—Boston, Shore (unassisted), 15:52. Third period—Boston, R. Conacher (Cowley), 8:06.

Hoyas to Elect '39 Grid Captain This Afternoon

Georgetown University's undefeated football squad will gather in the classroom of the Old North Building this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to select a captain for the 1939 season and name the letter winners.

The Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J., faculty director of student athletics, and Jack Hagerty, head football coach, will address the gathering.

It is Hagerty's custom to appoint a captain prior to each game and to elect a permanent captain after the close of the season. This practice has gained considerable favor at the Hilltop.

The Hoyas yesterday were elated over the selection of Augie Lio, junior guard, on the Associated Press' All-Eastern team. Lio already has been cited for honorable mention on several All-America teams and is ranked among the finest guards in the history of Georgetown.

Soon Paul Courtreau, Washington center, came to his rescue and in no time there were struggling knots of Eagles and Sea Gulls. Spares spilled out from their benches and Referee Pat Reilly and Linesman Phil La Blatt came hurriedly to restore order.

Restore order they did, finally, but not until the Stadium resounded with the blood-curdling cries that aroused fans somehow always let loose at the sight of young men attempting to mangle each other.

For their parts in the short but jolting punching barrage, McTeer and Tustin drew five-minute banishments—the stiffest meted out here all season—and Courtreau one of two minutes.

Another 'Midget' Quintet To Defend McKinley Honors

By Bill Burnett

The smallest scholastic basketball coach in town, and the fieriest (next to Gonzaga's Coach Mitchell), has given up all pretense of putting a tall team on the court.

As a matter of fact, Coach Bruce Kessler, of Tech, has but one man on his squad of 35 who could stretch himself to 6 feet if he tried. He's Buddy Webb, chunky baseball pitcher, who has sliced 30 pounds off his immense frame and now scales a neat 228.

The others are a short crowd, more deserving even of their "Maroon Midget" nickname than the undersized aggregation which surprised all and sundry—including itself—by reaching the finals of the interhigh championship tournament last season.

Marshall Dellinger, elected captain of Tech's forces recently, is a perfect example of the team's size. With a few slugs in his pockets he'd tip the scales at almost 128, and 5-feet-10 is the extent of his height. At that, spectators at Tech's court outings last year will tell you he's as classic a ball handler as a coach could wish. And he's fast and a team player, points Kessler likes particularly.

In support of this tiny basketman are three lettermen, none able to boast an inch over him. Jack Walsh the only other regular left from 1938-39 after the departure of Moe Shulman for Eastern, is considerably heavier but no taller. Bob (Shipwreck) Kelly and "Shrimp" Brewer are best described by the nickname of the latter. Each is an efficient and aggressive player, however.

Up from the junior varsity, which turned in an enviable record last year, are a number of "coming" youngsters. Johnny Catloth, bat boy for the Washington Nationals; Babe Boyle and Tommy Burnett are probably the standouts. Tommy O'Neal, Dutch Teeple, Bill Swor and Ed Barton are of about equal ability and should see action in Kessler's system of alternating two teams.

Up to this point in his third year of coaching at McKinley, Kessler has made no definite choices for the team to start against Bethesda-Chevy Chase on December 15—except, of course, Dellinger and Walsh.

"We'll do all right," he said yesterday, "if I can work these kids into a team. So far I've concentrated on individuals. Everything will depend on how each boy works into each spot. Catloth looks good because he's a deadly pot-shot—but slow. Webb is an under-the-basket expert, also slow. There's plenty of speed in Walsh and Dellinger and Kelley, though."

Accused of favoring small players, Kessler laughed:

"Something seems to be wrong in this part of the city," he said. "The kids don't seem to grow very high. Can I help it if they are all like me?"

East's Rose Bowl Choice Depends On Pacific Finale

By the Associated Press

Corvallis, Oreg., Dec. 5.—Prof. C. V. Ruzek, of Oregon State College, president of the Pacific Coast Conference, will announce the West's Rose Bowl representative here Saturday night.

He instructed the ten member schools today to telegraph their selections after Saturday's game between Southern California and University of California at Los Angeles.

Prof. Ruzek explained he was without authority to advise the Trojans and the Bruins to feel out possible opponents for the New Year's Day football classic.

"All the conference does is select the Western representative, who has sole responsibility to extend the invitation," he said.

30 Members Of the Giants Share in Pool

Team Leaves New York Tomorrow for Title Game With Green Bay

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—Thirty active members of the New York Giants Professional Football Club and two coaches, Steve Owen and his assistant, Bo Molenda, today were voted full shares of the team's pool of the championship game to be played against Green Bay Sunday.

One other share was divided between Stan Galazin, who played part of the season with the Giants, and Gus Mauch and Charles Porter, trainers.

The thirty-fourth share will be divided between Dr. Francis Sweeny, team physician; Henry Fabian, groundkeeper at the Polo Grounds; Joe Carroll, clubhouse boy, and Fred and Ed Logan, clubhouse attendants.

The Giants, all in good physical trim except Tuffy Leemans, hard-running back, will leave New York Thursday afternoon for Milwaukee, site of the title game. They will arrive in the Wisconsin town at noon Friday and plan a workout that afternoon, weather permitting.

Leemans did not take part in today's workout, but will play Sunday, officials said.

Redskin Star's Nuptials Kept Secret; Andy Will Follow Tuesday in Mich.

Ryan met while Andy, then a football star at Detroit University, was recovering from a broken leg.

First news of the "quarterback sneak" came to most of the Redskin officials and players when the 31-year-old former All-American from the University of California and his bride were well on the way to a Rochester, N. Y., honeymoon. Pinckert has an off-season job there with a woolen mill.

The quick ceremony took place after the grid star and his bride got a license from Deputy Marriage License Clerk Earl R. Sullivan about 4:30 and hastened to the church accompanied by the best man, C. Standifer Peak, former University of Georgia football player, whom Pinckert met in the Pasadena game of 1934, and Jack Tulloch, sports-writer of the Alexandria Gazette, a witness.

The former Mrs. Parenicka came east from her Beverly Hills home to attend the Redskin-New York Giants game in New York Sunday.

The couple rushed from the ceremony into an auto to start their honeymoon to Rochester. They were given a cheer by a group of Virginia Public Service employes who had gotten wind of the ceremony and had collected in front of the church.

She is 22 and a graduate nurse on the staff of Providence Hospital in Detroit. She and Farkas met two years ago when he was convalescing from a leg injury suffered while playing for University of Detroit.

Roman Boy Wins at Charles Town

Victor Runs Out but Gains Down Stretch

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 5.—Roman Boy, the sprint king of the smaller tracks, added another jewel to his crown in winning the Manfuso Purse, feature of the Tuesday program here in Jefferson County. Installed an odds-on favorite, the son of Ha Ha gave the horse laugh to his rivals despite the fact that he ran out at the turn into the stretch, a maneuver which generally means defeat.

Performing in the interest of P. H. Faulconer, Roman Boy reached the finish line a length and a quarter in advance of a tight fit for second money in which the camera gave it to Tuleyries Lin. Third position went to Hiblaze.

Roman Boy, in winning his seventh start of the year in 14 outings, paid a $3.80 mutuel and turned in time of 0:49 3-5 over a good track. Apprentice Donald Hamer did the riding.

A limit field of eight faced the starter for the hop, skip and jump of about 4½ furlongs. Roman Boy, from his outside post position showed in front at the first hop. Hiblaze and Tuleyries Lin were closest as the field went to the turn. At this point, Ravenhurst ran to the outside fence and was pulled up.

Roman Boy opened a good lead on the swing for the final bond and there he got out of control of Hamer and crossed the track almost at a right angle. Hamer jerked him straight, however, and he set sail again. Meanwhile, both Tuleyries Lin and Hiblaze had saved ground but they could not cope with Roman Boy's speed. The colt came on again and was holding his advantage at the close.

At The Post

Dear Al:

What is the story? Did Jockey Hacker claim a foul after yesterday's first race or did he go up to find out what time it was? The crowd is entitled to know that a foul has been claimed. Why was not the "objection" sign lighted? The difference is that some people destroy their tickets after a race and the board fails to show a foul claim. It's a pretty board but let's use it right. Well, the big horse Dunlad goes today. He wangled into the fourth race by a lip. Trainer Bob Cook took a look at the line-up and said, "somebody has to be third." After I looked at the company, I said, "Yes, and somebody has to be last." If he could only run like he eats. One thing is certain, we'll be trying but his opposition is not maidens. Those who come up on the race special miss Stewart Bavis. What's the story on his not being around this fall? Trainer Johnny McPhillips reports that the 11-year-old Adriatic, who won five races during last summer's meeting, will go postward in a few days. Adriatic is probably the oldest thoroughbred racing here. Al Lewis, Tommy Holton and Jimmy Wray are the latest to join the local riding colony. The first two are apprentices and came in from Chicago and East St. Louis, respectively. Everett Brining sold Golden Key at private terms to J. K. Whyenkoff, and Walli to C. Brining, his brother. E. Rinaldi, resident of this State, purchased Stealing Home at private terms from S. Hoffman. President Al J. Boyle has W. J. Daly taking entries each morning at the Berryville, Va., track, so that horsemen stabled there will get the same consideration as those quartered here. The West Virginia Racing Commission has licensed 178 trainers to date, a record for fall racing at this track. Only eight horses can start in claiming races, but Secretary Burton is considering having ten-horse fields in his handicaps, which would prove extremely popular with horsemen. Frank Cronan, former scribe of Washington, is doing a nice job on the loud speaker system. Calls the four leading horses at every pole and has yet to bobble on a color. BILL.

First race—Espino Gold showed a lot of front-running ability on the big tracks and might take command at the break and stay in front. Callao has plenty of speed and has won over as good as these. Golden Rapier will be a threat if in action.

Second race—Colleen Donn comes here with a good reputation and may make every post a winning one. Evergrand has some class and should be in the thick of contention. Rough Buddy would have to be dealt with if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—Circus Lights has shown enough to warrant a top selection in this company and needs only the right ride. Little Harpist was improving when Bowie closed and appears to be the one to beat here. Morning Flight to take care of the others.

Fourth race—War Rumor, favored by the inside post position, should do a lot of running in this distance event and gets the call. Darby Du has shown good form against better horses but there must be something wrong. Easter Holiday needs only to get off the reserve list to be a keen factor.

Fifth race—Royal Teddy's jockey was injured leaving the gate in his last and with better luck this one may take the measure of this good field. Royal Business is a tough nut to crack and is in form. High Hedge for the show end.

Sixth race—Burner has plenty of speed and is the type suited for this track. Will have to be caught. Howard is good now and is capable of carrying the 118 pounds. Setemup for the show award.

Seventh race—Registerite is the class of this field but will have to be moved off the also eligible list. Counter Pass loves the track and the distance. Last Scamp may take care of the third money.

Eighth race (substitute)—If this race is used, I'll take Wahcoo, Land of Smiles and Rosin.

Best bet—Registerite.

Stocks Retain Moderate Gain In Dull Trading

Recovery of Finnish 6 Per Cent, Up 2¾, Is Bond Market Feature

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 5.—Buying in selected stocks, principally aviations and specialties, provided a little recovery fuel for today's market. Gains of fractions to more than a point were posted for favorites, although numerous issues continued to lag and top marks in many cases were shaded at the close.

Dealings were moderately active in the first hour. They slackened from then on. Transfers, though, amounted to 589,620 shares against 427,815 yesterday, which was the smallest turnover for a full session since July 11. The Associated Press average of 60 issues held an advance of 0.2 of a point at 50.4. This time a year ago the composite stood at 50.5.

Traders had nothing much in the way of news to go on, but some purchasing was attributed to the belief the lengthy side-wise shift of the list called for a temporary upward "correction." It was noted the market had retracted almost 45 per cent of its postwar upswing.

Aircrafts in Demand

Stocks in front at the finish were Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Wright Aeronautical, Eastern Air Lines, American Airlines, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Philip Morris, Kennecott, Crucible Steel, Great Northern, American Telephone and U. S. Rubber.

U. S. Steel was up ⅛ but Bethlehem lost ¼. General Motors and Chrysler were unchanged. Off moderately were Sears Roebuck, General Electric, Consolidated Edison, Woolworth, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania.

Loft dipped a fraction following announcement of the $15 Pepsi-Cola dividend. The payment was in line with forecasts. It was estimated shares of Loft, which owns the majority of Pepsi-Cola stock, would benefit more than $2 a share by the disbursement.

International Nickel lost ¾, apparently on fears the Russian invasion of Finland would endanger the company's properties in the latter country.

Brisk curb dealings lifted Fiske Rubber ⅝ following news a merger with U. S. Rubber was being considered. Narrowly lower were Lockheed, Electric Bond & Share and Creole Petroleum. Turnover of 151,000 shares compared with 109,000 Monday.

Scandinavian Bonds

Finnish government bonds advanced today—moving counter to the general foreign loan list. As Finland's army blocked, at least momentarily, the drive of Russian forces, the country's 6 per cent bonds ended the day at 36⅝, up 2¾ points from yesterday's final quotation which was nearly 21 points down from Saturday's close.

Other Scandinavians, however, declined again, with Oslo City 4½s tumbling 10¼ points at 71 and Danish and Norwegian governments from fractions to 3 points. Elsewhere in the foreign list, virtually the only other gainers were Latin Americans.

United States Government loans, which held firm for most of the session, slipped toward the end and finished as much as 14/32 point lower. Transactions, however, were moderate.

Corporates in general were slightly higher. Included were Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4½s at 16½; Chesapeake & Ohio 3½s at 98⅝; Columbia Gas & Electric 5s of '61 at 103¾; International Hydro Electric 6s at 71; New York Central 5s at 60¼, and Western Union 5s of '60 at 67¼.

Transactions totaled $6,884,250, face value, compared with $5,349,500 yesterday.

U. S. Buys 50% More From Argentina

Buenos Aires, Dec. 5 (AP).—A 50 per cent increase in United States purchases from Argentina in the first 11 months of this year over the like 1938 period was disclosed today by a United States consular report.

The consulates, totaling declared export values, found that the United States has bought $55,478,994 worth of goods from Argentina so far this year, compared with $36,492,912 in the first 11 months of 1938.

Month's Egg Trading 91,968,000 Dozens

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—All November records for futures trading were broken on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange last month, Lloyd S. Tenney, business manager, said today. Transactions involved 91,968,000 dozens, compared with 8,472,000 dozens in November last year, and a 10-year November average of 63,480,000 dozens. The previous November record was established in 1925 when transfers totaled 90,108,000 dozens. For the first 11 months this year egg futures sale totaled 492,996,000 dozens, an increase of 7 per cent over the 461,760,000 total for the like 1938 period and a new high for the period since 1933.

Willkie Yields Michigan Part Of Bond Issue

But SEC Denies Plea of Cleveland Firm to Intervene

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission denied yesterday the petition of Otis & Co. Cleveland investment house, and others, to intervene in the application of Consumers Power, Jackson, Mich., utility, to issue $28,594,000 of 3¼ per cent first mortgage bonds and 125,000 shares of common stock.

The commission granted the Cleveland firm and the others the right to produce testimony and cross-examine witnesses, however. Officials said this was more restricted than the right to intervene.

Announcement of the commission's decision was made at the close of a day of testimony in which Wendell L. Willkie, head of the huge Commonwealth & Southern System, of which Consumers Power is a part, announced that overnight he had decided to permit Michigan investment firms to handle $1,000,000 of the bond issue.

Willkie testified that the change had been made last night, after Otis & Co., Cleveland banking house, and others, had sought to intervene.

Otis & Co. and the others protested that they were not given a chance to bid for the privilege of handling the securities, pointing out that Morgan Stanley & Co. and Bonbright & Co., large New York houses, headed the list of 27 underwriters for the proposed issue and had handled most of the business for Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, parent holding company of the half-billion utility system which includes Consumers Power.

Willkie, head of both Consumers Power and Commonwealth, said that the $1,000,000 to be allotted the Michigan firms would be taken from the amounts previously allotted in the contract to Morgan Stanley & Co. and Bonbright & Co.

Dollar Wheat Returns After 21 Months

Price Is Paid for No. 3 Red as Buying Wave Lifts All Grains

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 5.—World wheat prices soared more than 3 cents a bushel today in the wake of bad crop news from the great surplus producing belts of southwestern United States and Argentina.

Dollar wheat—paid for No. 3 red in the spot market—came back to the Chicago Board of Trade for the first time since March, 1938. With actual wheat quoted as much as 6 cents or more over futures, better grades of grain were priced above a dollar but no sales were recorded.

The strongest wave of buying engulfed the futures market since the September war boom, and prices were the highest in almost two years. A steady advance, despite heavy profit taking that caused occasional small reactions, enabled wheat to close at the best levels of the day or 2½@3¼ cents higher than yesterday, with December at 95¾@96, and May, 92½@92¾. Winnipeg figures were as much as 3⅝@3⅞ higher at one stage while Buenos Aires quotations rose about 3 cents before reacting.

Other grains advanced with wheat here. Corn closed ¾@1 cent higher; December, 54⅛; May, 55½@55⅝; Oats, ½@¾ up, and Rye, 2⅛@3 higher. Soy beans lost ⅛@⅜, and lard gained 13@17 cents.

The rush to buy wheat, in which exporters and millers participated, was touched off by reports of severe frost damage in Argentina, where the new crop is being harvested. A half hour after the opening five Chicago crop experts released December estimates indicating that the 1939 drought in this country has given winter wheat its poorest start on record.

Canada Ships U. S. $58,068,986 Gold

By the Associated Press.

Huge British Empire shipments swelled imports of gold last week to $93,771,174. This, the largest amount to enter the United States since the middle of September, was nearly eight times as much as imports of the preceding week. It could be used to get cash to pay for airplanes or other items in this country.

Most of the imports were made up of shipments totaling $58,068,986 from Canada, 7,830,637 from England, $6,264,104 from South Africa, $6,200,215 from India, and 5,084,931 from Australia. The only other sizable shipments were $4,721,536 from Japan, 2,060,009 from the Netherlands, and $1,650,378 from Mexico.

Preserve One Great, Free Nation By Avoiding War, Castle Urges

Last War, Fought for Democracy, Says Former Undersecretary of State, Seems To Have Left World Safe for the Dictators

By Thomas M. Cahill.

To avoid becoming hampered by martial regulations and more serious economic troubles than any we have seen so far, the United States must keep out of war. This was the advice of William R. Castle, former Undersecretary of State and Ambassador to Japan in the Hoover Administration, given last night at a forum meeting of the American Institute of Banking at the Willard Hotel. Speaking on "The War and We the People," the veteran diplomat emphasized that this position must be taken not only for ourselves but even more for the sake of the post-war world.

"For the love of heaven," was his plea to an audience of more than 200, "Let us make sure that there shall be, when once the war is over, at least this one great and powerful, free and democratic country which can hold out a helping hand to a floundering world and show to the other nations the virtues and powers of a democratic government."

Remarking some one had said recently that he saw no reason why America should get into the war before the belligerents, the speaker declared, "My comment on that would be that there is not any reason why we should get into it now, or in any foreseeable future.

Making World Safe for Hitler

"That statement," he explained, "does not mean that I fail to appreciate the fine, unselfish sentiments of those—especially young people who would have to do the fighting—who think this is a war for democracy and civilization and that we ought to get in. I cannot forget the last war, when we fought to make the world safe for democracy—and for Mussolini and Hitler and Stalin and all the rest of them."

Reminding that we can always invent possibilities as to what may happen, he enumerated and answered some of the most frequent, saying: "What if the British fleet should be destroyed? This is possible, I suppose, but almost a fairy story; and certainly no power, after taking on this superhuman task, would be in any position to attack the United States. What if Germany should invade the Western Hemisphere. Such a question rises only out of bad dreams. Only one answer to such a question is possible. That answer would be: 'Conditions are conceivable which would bring us into the war, and if these conditions should ever be present, we should not hesitate. These conditions will not be present until our own safety is in danger. In the meantime, let us be prepared financially, morally and in a reasonable military sense. But let us never be stampeded into precipitate action."

Thousand Reasons

According to the speaker, there are a thousand reasons why we should keep out, and those purely for our own sake are clear enough. "With our already stupendous national debt," he recounted, "we cannot afford, without almost certain disaster, to pile on more and more billions. Since the depression began in 1929, we have been struggling with our own internal conditions, and we do not yet see the light. We have extravagant expenses to curtail. We have almost unbearable labor troubles. We have lost our foreign markets for agricultural products, cotton, which need it most, more than any other. Our Government has been experimenting along every line, undoubtedly with good intentions, but also without adequate or sufficient caution. Somehow, we have got to redress the balance and bring back sanity and clear thinking into our national life.

"You can think of numberless other reasons," he continued. "Our obligations towards others are never quite as clear as our duties to ourselves. I have said and have been criticized angrily, especially in England, for saying that we were not called to enter this war because it, like former wars, had its roots in territorial ambitions and desires with which we have no concern. I have been assured that this is a wholly untrue assertion; that Britain's only purpose is to make the world a place where men can Britain is determined to do away, themselves as they wish; that still be free to think and speak for once and for all, with the menace of Hitler and Hitlerism.

Nazi Ambitions

"I believe this, as it applies to the thinking minority, but this does not change the fact that what brought about the war was territorial ambition—not, to be sure, on the part of Great Britain, except to keep what it has, but of Germany. The Russian seizure of territory came later. The war is being fought because Hitler, and back of him, the German people, want the colonies which were taken away from them after the war; because they want land wherever they can get it; want to reach out and live the kind of life they envy the British for.

"I shall not here discuss whether the life lived by the British has anything to do with owning colonies," was his comment. "It seems to me to have to do with character. But, that is beside the point. What I want to bring out is that if Hitler had been exactly what he is, a brutal dictator, but had, nevertheless, stayed within the borders of Germany, neither the British nor anybody else, though they all knew about his pernicious ideas and the bad example the Nazis might spread abroad, would have started any war for the freedom of man. People would merely have said: 'Things are pretty rotten in Germany, aren't they?' and let it go at that.

Stalin and Hitler

"What makes the British and French attitude seem a little self-righteous and more than a little inconsistent, is that everything they say of Hitler and Hitlerism applies, as they well know, with equal or greater force to Stalin or Stalinism. I would rather live on a desert island than be a German living in Germany under Hitler, but, even so, I have to recognize that under Hitler I should have a lot more freedom and chance of happiness than under Stalin. The Russian attack on Finland was far more unjustified than the German attack on Poland.

"This does not mean," he said in explanation, "that I want the French and British to declare war on the Soviet until the activities of the Soviet have actually gone against some British or French commitment. With the Soviet really in the war, it might spread much more rapidly over the world and the chances of British and French success would consequently be less. I want them to win, as all of you do, and I want them to win as soon as possible so that the drain on the moral and physical resources of the whole world will end. But I could wish that so long as they are courting the good will of Russia and Italy, they would not talk quite so fluently about saving the world for the freedom of the individual. I should be just as pro-British if they said, honestly, 'We are fighting for our lives.'

"Ours just now," it seemed to the speaker, "is not the heroic part, except that self-restraint is often heroic in itself. He suggested that we must work to restore the financial soundness of the country so that when the time of the world's great need shall come we shall be ready to restore hope and financial prosperity. We must labor ceaselessly to keep our government pure and democratic, as well as efficient.

"Keep Out Valiantly"

"We must not today keep out of the war merely passively. It must be valiantly and with high purpose. We must keep in mind always our obligations to our Latin-American friends and neighbors, as well as to ourselves and, therefore, spend such money as is necessary for adequate defense. On the other hand, we must not be stampeded into absurd extravagances of military preparation which could be justified only if our country bordered on Germany or Russia."

Mr. Castle said there was much for diplomacy to do; that it must try to keep a balance in the Orient, and perhaps it is there we can most surely assist our friends in Europe by doing our part to prevent Japan from any alliance with Russia and Germany. Such an unnatural union could not last for long, but for the time being would force England to send part of her fleet to the Orient. Good diplomacy on our part, he declared, can protect American rights in the Orient and at the same time maintain friendship with Japan.

It is certain, he believes, that at the moment the officials of France and England do not want us in the war and possibly this may be partly for the reason that they believe the war will soon end. Expressing belief that Hitler did not like the Russian advance, he questioned, "What if Germany would have the courage to say to France and England: 'We will reconstitute Poland and Czecho-Slovakia somehow. Let us forget our quarrels and join to push back the bear clawing on the portals of Europe.' I think the war would end tomorrow."

"But aside from that," he concluded, "we must consider what our participation would mean in case of a long war. A man said to me recently—he was a Latin American, by the way—'Collectivism is growing in England. Do you think those colonies of children taken from their families in London and living a far happier life in the country will not gain a distaste for family life and a belief that collective life, under government auspices, is much better? France is becoming more and more a centralized dictatorship. Do you think the national government is going promptly to give up its powers and run the risk of another dictatorship of the proletariat?'

"There is a certain truth in this. The democratic nations of today will be far from democracy at the end of a long war."

Fisk Studies Merger With U. S. Rubber

U. S. Rubber, Seeking Tire Capacity, Plans Outright Purchases

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—The biggest merger in the rubber manufacturing field in several years was under consideration today as directors of Fisk Rubber Corporation studied a tentative offer by U. S. Rubber Co. to purchase the former's properties.

Francis B. Davis, jr., chairman and president of U. S. Rubber, second largest in the industry, announced his company was negotiating for the acquisition of Fisk and planned to make wider use of the Fisk plants if the deal is concluded. It would merge the properties and assets of Fisk, with a balance sheet total of 14,000,000, with the $180,000,000 capital and physical structure of U. S. Rubber.

Formal Offer Expected

A statement by Col. Charles E. Speaks, president of Fisk, following a meeting of his board late this afternoon, confirmed the negotiations, but added that no action was taken. Financial quarters understood that U. S. Rubber would make its "formal" offer within the next week. The proposed terms were not disclosed.

Fisk is one of the smaller tire manufacturers.

Davis explained, that U. S. Rubber, seeking additional tire capacity, attempted to work out a supply arrangement with Fisk and then turned to negotiations for outright purchase when the other plan proved to be unworkable.

"We consider it better," he said, "for the industry generally to use existing capacity than build additional plants in an industry which already has overcapacity."

U. S. Rubber's 22 domestic plants are located throughout the country.

Chicopee Protests Merger

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 5 (AP).—A group of minority stockholders of the Fisk Rubber Corporation and Mayor Anthony Stonina, of Chicopee, joined in registering strong opposition today to a tentative offer from the U. S. Rubber Co. for the purchase of the Fisk firm's properties.

French Buying Board Opens New York Office

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The French purchasing commission has opened an office in Broad street, in the downtown financial district, to cooperate with the British purchasing commission in war supply buying, it was announced today. A joint purchasing board has been set up, it was explained, but the two commissions will maintain separate offices. The British and French governments have been coordinating their economies for war purposes.

Arthur B. Purvis, general director of the British commission, has been named chairman of the Anglo-French Purchasing Board in the United States—its official title—and Frederic Bloch-Laine, head of the French group, vice chairman of the joint body. The British commission, also domiciled in the financial district, has been organizing a purchasing staff.

American Co. Pays $2.50 on Preferred

The American Co., through John Poole, president, announced yesterday that dividend checks were being mailed to all preferred stockholders on the basis of $2.50 per share, a like amount having also been paid on June 6, making a total of $5 per share for the year.

This company reports a healthy increase in its general real estate and insurance business.

Sales Topple Cotton From Season's Top

January Delivery Bears Brunt of the Heavy Selling

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—Heavy selling undermined the cotton futures market today after early demand carried the list to new highs for the season. Closing prices were 2 points higher to 4 lower.

Pressure came through a leading spot house in the last two hours of trade. Most of the selling hit the January delivery and was thought to represent hedges.

Despite the reaction traders seemed a little more optimistic in the face of a weak Bombay market and hesitancy at Liverpool.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's announcement of a 50 per cent cut in the export subsidy came too late to affect the market.

Worth street reported only scattered sales of print cloths for quick delivery at steady prices.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures jumped 18 to 25 points today, pushing July delivery to a new high price for the season. The swing was the widest in days.

Brokers cited improvement in cash demand for oil from consumers and the abrupt slackening of hedging pressure as bullish factors.

Sales totaled 199 contracts: December *8.70, January *8.68, March 8.85, May *8.94, July *7.04.

Late sales of crude oil were made at 8½ cents in the Southeast and Valley and business was done in Texas at 8.80 to 8.85 cents.

Cruiser to Bear Career Diplomat's Body to Homeland

Cuba is i official mourning today fo the death of United States Ambassador J. Butler Wright, 62, whose body will be placed on the cruiser Omaha tomorrow for return to Washington. Wright died Monday following an operation for a pancreatic ailment.

President Laredo Bru of Cuba yesterday sent President Roosevelt a message of condolence at the same time he decreed national mourning. Funeral arrangements, which have not yet been completed, will be at the National Cathedral in Washington. With him at the time of his death were his wife, and daughters, Edith and Mary.

A career diplomat, Wright was made Third Assistant Secretary of State in 1923, and from 1924 to 1928 served as Assistant Secretary of State. He spent three years as Minister to Hungary, four years as Minister to Uruguay, and three years as Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, leaving Prague in 1937 to become Ambassador to Cuba.

He was born at Irving-on-Hudson, N. Y., and educated at Lawrenceville School and Princeton University. After six years in the banking and brokerage business, he went West to raise livestock in Wyoming. In 1909 he entered the diplomatic service as secretary of the American Legation at Tegucigalpa, Honduras. He was ordered to Washington for special duty in the State Department three years later and then went to Brussels as secretary of the legation. In 1915 he was made acting chief of the division of Latin American affairs of the State Department and later held posts at Leningrad and London.

Of a cheerful nature, Wright was in constant demand at social functions here. For many years he held the reputation of being the best-dressed man in official circles in Washington.

Unlike Humpty Dumpty, this freight car did not fall off the wall. It traveled in reverse with such force, however, that several large stones were knocked to the street from the overpass at Virginia avenue and Third street southwest. The boxcar projected over the sidewalk about six feet

Kindler Arouses Sympahty For Finland by Sibelius' Music

Conductor Declines to Give an Encore In Syracuse, Explaining He Wants Audience To Remember Courage in Finnish Symphony

By John Chabot Smith
A Staff Correspondent.

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 5.—The National Symphony Orchestra invaded the campus of Cornell University tonight and took possession of three classrooms to dress before the second concert of their Northern tour.

The musicians came here from Syracuse in three buses through switchback country roads, over hillsides gray-brown in the shadows and golden in the late afternoon sunlight. White squares patterned the slopes where a light snow lay unmelted in plowed fields.

The first concert was given in the Syracuse Central High School last night, and ended with a five-minute ovation from nearly 3,000 listeners. Dr. Hans Kindler, the conductor, turned it into a tribute to struggling Finland in a brief parting speech.

Sibelius' Symphony Played

The second symphony by the Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius, filled the second half of the program. The music was passionate, proud, and confident, with sweeping rhythms and boldly prominent colors to describe Finland's broad spaces and beautiful waters. Dr. Kindler directed it conscious of the patriotic message it carries, no less pronounced than in the same composer's "Finlandia."

The orchestra was prepared to play encores, and the audience was clamoring. But Dr. Kindler raised his hand and said, "After hearing Sibelius' great symphony, you do not want to hear anything more. I would much rather leave the thought of a victorious Finland in your heart."

During the intermission, Dr. William Berwald, founder of the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra, had come backstage to renew his acquaintance with Dr. Kindler and congratulate him on his interpretation of Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" and his arrangement of the excerpts from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounov," which were played in the first portion of the program.

Reception by Fraternity

After the concert, confusion filled the girls' gymnasium behind the stage as drums and stands were boxed again and the cellists and double-bass players took off their formal work clothes to pack them again in massive trunks with their instruments. Dr. Kindler vanished in his fur-lined great coat through the crowd of admirers waiting at his door, and the musicians dispersed.

Some knew the town only from their visit last year, but Horn Player Vanleer Lanning found a local chapter of his fraternity, Phi Mu Alpha, where a reception was to be given the orchestra in the chapter's new house.

There some 20 members of the orchestra joined with double the number of music students of Syracuse University in a buffet supper, songs, much telling of anecdotes and very little "shop talk." They talked of Victor Herbert, under whom several of the older members played before his death; of the incomparable Toscanini, and then of Dr. Kindler.

"Kindler has so many things—insight into music, literature and art; he knows people, and can speak to an audience. Toscanini couldn't say a word to the audience—he doesn't care about them. I don't think he knows they're there."

Most of the players are young, the average age being about 30. At least one is a native of the District, and only a few were born outside the United States. Most came to the National Symphony Orchestra from similar orchestras or theater work.

A Hollywood background is not uncommon. Harry Rosoff, violinist, started playing in theaters after leaving the Julliard Institute, but later became interested in movie cartoons. Music is of fundamental importance in all cartoon work. Melodies suggest action, and the interplay of counter themes has to be expressed in the action of secondary characters.

Rosoff is not the only cartoonist in the orchestra, it appeared the moment the group found the chalk in tonight's schoolroom dressing room. In five minutes the players covered the blackboards with caricatures of each other which made up in accurate wit whatever they lacked in artisticness. Only long association with the subjects could have produced them. There will be neither receptions nor relaxations after tonight's concert, for the musicians will leave at once in their buses for Elmira, N. Y., where tomorrow's concert is to be given.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The importance of the opening lead is stressed by the result of today's hand, submitted by an anonymous contributor. South, declarer, was able to win a highly optimistic six no-trump contract through the lead from a king by a defender.

Here is what he says:

"Recently in a rubber game I was 'hooked' by the luck of the draw with an unbelievably bad player against two very fine players. In spite of the fact that we had held 'all the cards' we were still struggling along with both sides vulnerable when I, South, dealt this hand.

"When I picked it up I said: 'This is a gift from the gods as recompense for my drawing the dumbbell across from me. Although a slam is highly probable. I'll take no chances on losing this rubber by attempting to develop the bidding. I must shut him out, if possible, and play the hand myself.'

"I did play the hand, but did not shut him out—fortunately. He'll never know how near he came to being murdered as he spread the dummy. He explained afterward that his hand was unsuited to no trump and he thought it would play better at spades. Be that as it may, it offered the only way to a small slam.

"Dummy's ten held the lead upon the opening of the heart five. The jack of spades was not covered, and declarer continued with the queen and ace. The ace and king of clubs were cashed, followed by the ace and queen of hearts, South claiming the remaining tricks after West won the heart king. He saved the three of spades to enter dummy to cash two spade tricks."

Listen! with Slocum

Late in the summer, on a visit to Washington, world-famous reporter Edwin C. Hill, (WJSV, 6:05-6:15 p. m., Monday through Friday), devoted his nightly broadcast to an absorbing description of the growth of the Nation's Capital, its public buildings and parks, in the last two generations—apace with the expansion of the Federal Government during that time. Recently, when Hill returned to Washington on another trip, he presented a special recording of that historical broadcast to the member of Congress with the longest record of service, United States Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, who has seen much of the growth of Washington.

Edwin C. Hill

Hill is not new to Washington nor is the Capital new to Hill. He has known personally every President since Theodore Roosevelt. On the walls of Hill's office in New York hangs a picture of the first Roosevelt with the inscription, "To Edwin C. Hill, the unofficial member of my Cabinet." Beside, it are the pictures, similarly inscribed, of many foreign Presidents, premiers, and members of royalty. During the early years of the Twentieth Century, Hill became a familiar fignre here as a Washington newspaper correspondent.

Raised in Indiana, Hill has been a reporter all his life, starting on Indianapolis newspapers and continuing his newspaper work in New York with the old Sun. For 20 years he roamed the earth, covering all the major capitals of the world and most of the cities in his travels as a reporter. In 1925, he brought his talents to motion pictures, becoming scenario director and a producer for Fox films. After a short time, however, he was back in reporting work, his first love.

Every night, Monday through Friday, on David Ross' call, "Listen!" Mr. Hill presents his news broadcast in the human-side-of-the-news manner made famous by him.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Synopsis

It was two weeks since Dr. Chris Arden completed his interneship and started a practice of his own. His first mistake was to rent an office and room from the shiftless Walters family but he had felt sorry for mild, inefficient Henry Walters and his drab, listless wife, Lily. They obviously needed the money. His sympathy did not lessen when he thought of their lazy daughter, Katie, and no-'er-do-well son, Dick. It is Sunday morning, and Chris descends the stairs to his office with a jaunty step. No one looking at him could know that here was a new doctor ready to serve a city which was seemingly unaware of his existence. But Chris does have one patient that morning. Beverly Lewis, from the mansion on the hill, brings her terrier and apologetically asks him to remove a bone from the dog's throat. Beverly cries with relief when it is over. Having forgotten her handkerchief, Chris goes to get her a towel, but his careless housekeepers had forgotten to put any on the rack. Searching everywhere, he finally finds one in the kitchen.

Chapter IV

When he returned to the office, it was to find the girl more embarrassed than he was.

"I caught it," he said, holding out the towel. "It was a good run, but I wore it down. Look at it. It's exhausted."

She laughed and wiped her face, and the rubbing brought a faint color to her cheeks. Then she got up and looked at him uncertainly.

"I for got my bag, Doctor, but if you will take my name and address——"

"Nothing would please me more. But just why?"

"Don't tell me you won't make a charge for what you have done. I couldn't bear it."

He eyed her. "I did what any humane man would have done. If I'd seen your dog choking on the street, I'd have done the same thing. So don't spoil it. I'm not a veterinarian, and I happen to like dogs."

"You make me very uncomfortable."

"That's ridiculous. I had nothing else to do. I was merely putting in time until I started out to fool the neighbors." And as she looked puzzled—"pretending to be busy," he added, smiling down at her. "Every morning I pick up that bag over there and start out. The proper technique is to go out fast, as though in a hurry. Once around the corner, of course, I can slow down a bit, but I keep going."

"Then you are just starting?"

"Two weeks. Two endless, empty weeks."

She seemed so surprised at that, however, that he hastened to reassure her.

"Don't let that worry you. We all go through it. But as you go out you might look at my sign on the door. It may be a trifle modest, you know. There's a chap over on Hill street who has an appendix in a jar outside. They say he does a land-office business."

She smiled at that. "It looked like a very nice sign," she said, and got up. "And now, Doctor, if I leave my name and address, do please——"

"Don't be foolish. I'd have helped any dog."

"And you won't send a bill?"

"Certainly I won't send a bill."

Her chin went up, and he saw that her pride was affronted. But he had a very pretty pride of his own, and a chin as stubborn as hers.

"No bill," he repeated, and she stiffened and moved toward the door.

"Then I'm sorry I've been such a nuisance."

"No nuisance, either," said Chris. "And if you have any more dogs—!"

"Thanks," she said coldly. "I wouldn't dream of imposing on you again," and going out, the dog at her heels, slammed the door behind her.

"Now why did I say that?" Chris thought as he went back to straighten his office. "After all, she's a girl and a nice one, stubborn, too."

He smiled at the memory of that exit of hers, but he was not too comfortable. Out of sheer blazing pride he had affronted her, and there was less than his usual truculence in his carriage as he sought out Lily Walters in the back of the house. But once more Lily defeated him by her very weakness and ineptitude.

"I'm sorry about the twasis, Doctor. I was washing some when you call ed."

"Well, just so it doesn't happen again."

He looked at her. Here at last, he knew, after God knew what tragedy of living, she had found sanctuary for herself and her family. His success would be hers, his failure hers also. Henry tinkering in a back shed with his useless inventions; Dick haunting billiard parlors instead of hunting for work; even Katie, sulky and lazy, going to the high school and eyeing boys with a distaste which concealed a keen interest—all of them were hung around his neck by that sheer necessity of Lily's. He leaned over and patted her shoulder.

"Cheer up," he said. "It's only a matter of time, you know. We'll carry on all right."

But she hardly heard him. There was a sound of a door unlocking overhead, and then Dick's peevish voice.

"Hey, Mom. How about some coffee?"

Chris went back into the front hall, carefully straightening his tie in front of the mirror, picked up his black bag, and started out on his daily round, this time for the hospital.

But before he started, he looked about and, seeing nobody, got out his handkerchief again and rapidly and expertly polished his sign.

The hospital was very old. Nevertheless it was still useful, and largely dependent for its upkeep on one Staunton Lewis, local magnate and political power, whose enormous gray stone house crowned the ridge above the city, and who was popularly supposed—as to the hospital—either to be building a memorial to himself or buying favors of a God he had every reason to fear. Lewis or no Lewis, however, it was still the hospital. It welcomed to its doors all who needed it, sinners and saints, rich and poor; and for a time they ceased to be either one or the other, and were reduced to the common level of the beds on which they lay.

It changed with time, of course. The nurses no longer swept the floors with their long blue skirts; rubber soles had taken the place of the bandages worn over their shoes by the night workers. There were diet kitchens and dietitians now, and evening classes had superseded evening prayers.

Perhaps only Miss Nettie Simpson, the head of the training school, felt these changes or missed the prayers. She had given her life to her work, and she was still working, ruling her school with a rod of iron, moving from ward to ward, from bed to bed; and each night asking for and receiving strength for the day to come. But now she was old. Occasionally at the annual meeting, when she had made her report and departed, there was quiet talk of replacing Nettie. But the hospital temporized and compromised. Her assistant was of the new school, brisk and modern. They let it go at that.

But Miss Simpson knew. Sometimes, sitting in her quiet office, she felt slightly dazed. How far back she could remember! The day of the carbolic spray, and an odor that followed and stuck definitely. Like iodoform; carbolic and iodoform—they were an era in themselves.
